OAK MOTOR OIL

More Gas Mileage
More Oil Mileage
Longer Motor Life
More Power
Faster Acceleration
No Sticky Valves

More Oil Mileage

A special manufacturing process gives Oak Motor Oil more adhesiveness and less evaporation than other oils. You can expect more mileage from a gallon of the new summer Oak than from most oils you can now purchase.

Longer Motor Life

A friction surface that is constantly lubricated, wears very little and never burns. Summer Oak is so fluid that it reaches all friction surfaces at the first revolution of a motor, and keeps them lubricated as long as there is oil in the crankcase. This prolongs motor life, and obviates the need for frequent motor adjustment and part replacement.

More Gas Mileage

You will notice a quicker starting and smoother running motor with Oak. This is due to freedom from Oil drag, caused by gummy, slow flowing oil. Oak's perfect lubrication will permit your motor to run an extra mile or two on each gallon of gas.

More Power

It is not always gasoline that enables a motor to develop more power. A perfectly lubricated motor does not require so much power to turn over, consequently delivers more power to your drive shaft. Try Oak and see how much easier you can "take" stiff grades.

Faster Acceleration, Cooler Motors

Freedom from Oil drag permits Oak-lubricated motors to get away faster. And for this same reason, your motor temperature will be lower whenever in service.

No Sticky Valves

With summer Oak, you get clean, clear Lubrication, free from the gum and residue that forms carbon and sticks piston rings and valves. Specify Oak summer and winter — and get thousands of more economical miles from your motor.

IN EGYPT AGAIN

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath

Rarely before has the age old story of the Haggadah rung so true as it will when we Jews gather about the Seder board on Monday evening next to recount once more that vivid tale. No longer will it sound, even to our children, as the tedious legend of a distant age, but the very youngest among us will recognize how sadly real and how unhappily contemporaneous that narrative yet remains.

For Israel is in Egypt once again, and with a new and poignant significance will we read of the "afflictions wherewith they afflicted them." To be sure, there has scarcely been a single hour since our distant forbears first began to fulfill the injunction to "teach it unto their children" but what that story applied to some Jew somewhere, persecuted still by the fiendish Pharoahs of the race. But even then, even in those jungle days of the Middle Ages, even amid Inquisition and Crusade, even in fact, when the agonizing shrieks of Kishineff were piercing our hearts — at least we had some slight solace in the thought that the time might not be too far distant when culture and enlightenment would be disseminated among all the sons of men and when prejudice and bigotry would be undone. For, after all, what could one expect of such uncivilized lands, where literacy was almost unknown and where the darkest superstitions still maintained? So, while it is true that Israel has never read the Seder story without realizing that her people dwelt still in many Egypts, yet there was here and there a Goshen in which the light of freedom burned bright and clear, presaging the day when universal enlightenment would bring universal redemption to the Jew.

But today, the light has seemingly failed completely as one of the most cultured and literate lands has become a veritable medieval shambles, nay, a primitive and barbaric jungle in which the strong ruthlessly seek to devour the week. And even the erstwhile Goshens seem lacking, as we behold the nations standing by, we suppose, for the rivers of Germany to run red with blood before they speak the determined word.

How striking, how terrible the analogy between those days of grinding Egyptian serfdom and the plight of German Jewry today. A midget once more in the seat of the mighty, cringing in abject terror before a tiny fragment of the inhabitants of the land, whipping himself into a frenzy of fear and oppressing this meagre minority with all manner of oppressive burdens "lest they become too numerous and mighty for us."

Pharoah, with all his chariots and horsemen, trembling like a shaken leaf before a handful of Hebrew slaves; Hitler, with all his hosts of well armed Nazis, terror-tricken before a bare half million of helpless Jews. The analogy is perfect indeed. And both Pharoah and Hitler in their maddened myopic vision seek to terminste this alleged threat to their one hundred per cent pure kingdoms by persecuting the ever hated Jews. But as in Egypt, in all nations and all times, so in Germany that basic characteristic of human nature will prove true again: "The more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and spread abroad." Yes, indeed, the more Herr Hitler grinds the Jew, the more intense and unified will be his loyalty and the stronger he will become — not in numbers or in physical prowess perhaps, but in those essential faculties by which alone any people can persist, by which alone the Jew has been able to outlive all the Pharoahs, Amaleks, Hamans and Caesars of history.

And the analogy becomes even more significant, even more tragic when we discover that as the world has not changed very much since Egyptian times, neither has the Jew. For do we not remember the pathetic blindness of those grovelling slaves in the face of Moses' heroic endeavours to redeem them. How the elders grumbled and rudely bade him to "mind his own affairs." Even so, when many a Moses would arise to crystallize the conscience of mankind into one determined plea for justice, the Jews of Germany—and not wholly through coercion — tell those who would sincerely and earnestly aid them, to keep hands off, for behold they are "trouble makers in the land." Yes, and Hitler, like Pharoah, knows only one answer to the poignant appeal for mercy: "Do these miserable serfs want to be freed? Well, we'll fix them," thundered Pharoah, if we be permitted such a colloquial paraphrase, "ye shall no more give the people straw wherewith to make bricks. Let them go and gather straw themselves," he commanded their taskmasters. And so Herr Adolf: "What, do those 'leperous Jewish rats' actually cry out when we beat and lash and maim and murder them; do they dare to run like tattle-tales to the world; have they the effrontery to impugn the ground German name by actually showing their mutilated bodies and scars to our enemies across the frontiers? The very idea! We'll show them! We'll hold the whole crowd of them as hostages. We'll keep our sharpened swords hanging menacingly over their heads; we'll close their shops and starve them to death if they so much as open their mouths. But if they are good children and say not a word no matter how mercilessly we afflict them, no matter how impudently we insult them, no matter how ruthlessly we destroy them, then maybe we'll relax our reign of terror and ruin them more subtly, more scientifically." Yea, verily Pharoah speaks again.

But despite all the threats, the faked broadcasts, the compulsory resolutions, the cry of our brethren in Germany cannot be silenced. It mounts up unto the very heavens, where as of old there yet is One who will answer: "I have surely seen the affliction of My people — and have heard their cry — for I know their pains." And as God brought Israel forth "out of the land of Egypt and the house of bondage," so will we be redeemed from the toils of Hitler. No longer do we believe that even that ancient Exodus was achieved by anything supernatural, by any violation of eternal and unchanging physical law. But we do believe that eternal and unchanging moral laws decreed that tyranny has within it the seeds of its own disintegration; that injustice so poisons the fibre of a people as to make inevitable its downfall. So today, miraculous plagues may not descend suddenly upon the land of Germany, but most assuredly there will come plagues, plagues even now in the making. Tyranny; begets tyranny; ruthlessness feeds on ruthlessness and the reckless abandon, the unconscionable callosity of Hitler and his henchmen are the surest prophecy of doom. Israel has seen it so many times before; Israel can be assured that God, the God who through the working of this absolute moral law has guarded us through all these centuries, will not forsake us now.

This does not mean that, like smug and saccharine optimists, we are to about: "God's in His heaven, all's right with the world." Not at all. There has been too much of that already. Perpetually smiling boosters, who for the past few years have proclaimed every gain Hitler made at the polls an "overwhelming defeat," who suavely assured us that even if he came into power, "which he won't," his wings would be clipped, and who even now smoothly predict that "he can't last long." No, we cannot rely upon such an optimism as that which waits serenely for some such "act of God." God works only through His Moses, through His prophets, through His children. We must be the "fingers of God," "the voice of God," Our brethren are being driven mad this very moment, if not by actual violence, then by stark and harrowing fear. We cannot wait complacently by for a heaven-sent Messiah. We must be that God-inspired Moses ourselves. We must move heaven and earth to capture

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor,
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

Each week on the front page of the Review there appears a case history from the files of the Toronto Federation, presented by Miss Florence Hutner. Similar case histories may be found in the files of any Federation and a compilation of them would make a living text-book in philanthropy. The purpose in publishing them is to add a touch of human interest to the work the Federation does wherever there is a Federation and to keep a bond between readers of the Review and work done by all charity organizations.

These case histories are of value to parents who wish their children to grow up with a sympathetic knowledge of those less fortunate and with some thought for the plight of those in distress. It is not necessary to terrify a child with ghastly stories or to weigh him down with a burden of grief in order to make him understand what other children suffer in this depression. He can and should be guided in fellow feeling for the dispossessed and others in tragic circumstances. How else can you expect him to emerge suddenly from a well-to-do environment as an adult with any responsibility toward the unfortunate in general?

The need of the human infant for long years of care gave to the race what John Dewey calls a push for human progress and in the same way the need of the helpless for help gives to children their best lesson in gentleness and humanitarian attitude. They should be particularly interested in how other children are faring at this time and what is being done for these children. To allow them to grow up through the present period without any such knowledge is to leave them uneducated no matter what other teaching they get.

In every public school to-day there are children who are not yet charity cases because their need is not known but who are on the border line of hunger just the same. Their tragedy is the Greek idea of tragedy: the fall from high estate. Their former estate was not that of the rich but it was high compared with what it is to-day. Their fathers were once trademen, skilled workers or professional men. They paid the rent or owned modest homes, they bought new styles in the season, they had insurance and a little money saved up, they sent their older children to college. Such people are appalled at the destitution which drives them at last to ask for charity. They do not go for help until every source of income has been exhausted or until they are evicted or until they have been hungry for two or three days. Children from such homes soon become unkempt, shabby and unable to measure up to the sheltered ones. Are your children taught to be understanding of such trouble?

A letter from Akron, Ohio, tells of the fortitude of children and the work that the Council of Jewish Women is doing every day in serving a hearty meal at noon to 75 poor children, only nine of whom are Jews. Two of them were "not allowed to eat meat away from home." The letter says: "Fancy that! They must all be charity cases, else they are turned away, so you can imagine how poor they are. Still two of them would not eat food that was not kosher. So, ever since the first day, cereal and milk and bread and butter were given to the children who won't eat trafe on the days they have meat."

An item in the Review recently told of the need of Toronto Little Sisters for dresses and stockings. The Little Sisters are in the care of the Big Sisters of the Council of Jewish Women, certain members of which pledged at a meeting lately to take care of one family each. The fine, active work the Council is doing should be an example to the youngest daughters who should be active little sisters to the Little Sisters. The Hebrew Maternity Aid Society is sponsoring Passover relief which should also receive the interest and co-operation of the children wherever this is possible.

Assistance for such efforts in the way of publicity comes before other appeals insofar as the Review can help. Publicity is the only solicitor which the needy have. Its words must urge a response on the part of men, women and children toward their hungering neighbors. Its duty is to espouse human causes and to speak for them in people's homes. Benjamin Franklin in his famous autobiography tells of how a doctor came to his house for help in raising funds for a hospital for the sick poor. Franklin gave money and also promised to ask others to give money. "Previously, however, to the solicitation," he wrote, "I endeavored to prepare the minds of the people by writing on the subject in the newspapers." f.f.c.

Among Our Jewish Women

Mrs. Sydney S. Kahn, 128 Clifton Road, says: "The importance for the self-expression of children through the medium of drama and music cannot be stressed sufficiently. Self-expression is the essential factor in their development. It brings to them a natural understanding of how things actually are and does not allow their imaginations to take on exaggerated and incongruous shapes of life. Modern educationists realise this and are endeavouring wherever and whenever it is possible to incorporate it in their teaching methods. Expression through drama is an important factor in the development of poise and children gain greatly through the study of it. I do not think parents realize the vast benefits derived from the participation in plays, for there is a noticeable lack of facilities for the running of them in this community. Children are permitted to pick up their ethical knowledge in the most poorly of ventilated places despite the fact that a greater part of their time is spent in these places than in the carefully appointed homes from where they come."

Jewish Refugees Find Haven in France

In Paris and throughout France there is marked sympathy for the German citizens of Jewish blood, accompanied and heightened by distrust of Nazi methods. That this feeling can by no means be described as merely diplomatic is evidenced by the indisputable fact that for many generations France has always extended complete equality of citizenship and of opportunity for a livelihood to members of the Jewish faith, and that one may live here for years without ever being reminded that such a thing as a Jewish problem exists in other European countries.

It is true that the Jews are at home in France and that they enjoy complete racial and personal freedom. For once, then, the self-congratulatory Frenchman can regard Germany's anti-Semitic suppressions and exclaim: "But one never does that in France," and be right about it. There can be no question then that France's doors will remain open to the German Jews as they have been for the last four weeks.

Turning to the political significance of the Hitlerites' headstrong action toward the Jews, one interesting possibility is conjectured upon here. This is that by such steps as its April 1 Jewish boycott edict the Hitler regime may be shortening its own life in the long run. This theory is based on the supposition that within a year or two the Nazi's hold upon the public imagination will begin to diminish radically — or perhaps before then — unless they produce evidences of ability at governing as well as at rhetoric.

If such dwindling of Nazi power and prestige eventuates, it is believed probable that Alfred Hugenberg's Nationalists and the outright Right in Germany will gain strength rapidly at Nazi expense and that this true German nationalist movement, declared monarchist in doctrine though it may be, would stand to gain much by a tolerant attitude toward the Jews.

Those well acquainted with Germany stress the fact that scores of her strongest bankers and leading industrialists are of the Jews and that the co-operation of these men must be enlisted to establish true stability in Germany. The outright nationalists, then, might strengthen themselves perceptibly by friendly overtures toward the Jew.

In this connection it may be well to mention that the very prevalent war fear in France and many parts of Europe as a result of Hitler's rise to power is here, at last, much more a matter of public than official concern. No informed authority believes the Nazis would risk touching off a European conflagration at the present moment.

Looking ahead, however, there are practical diplomats who feel that some more justifiable apprehension about war might be felt in from one to three years if Hitlerism reaches the pass where it is confronted with internal defeat unless Draconian measures are taken.

Meanwhile, however, the more prudent French statesman would welcome a chance to get Hitler seated around a table, perhaps in a four-powered conference at Geneva, where the meeting would unofficially be under the blessing of the League of Nations, and there, with Premier Benito Mussolini and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, present the German government with some polite but cogent reminders of Hitlerism's share of responsibility in European peace.

NAZI CLOUDS OVER GERMAN UNIVERSITIES

The present is not only a period of great seriousness for the German Republic but it is also a time of peril for German scholarship and science. Many of the distinguished professors at the universities, while they stoutly proclaim there has been no decline in the accomplishments of German scholars, are anxious about the future. They view with concern the intensification of party feeling among the students and the frequently recurring outbreaks against university authority. They are also disturbed at repressive measures that are being taken by the present government to discourage liberalism and freedom of thought says Thomas S. Baker in the New York Times.

Germany used to be called a nation of professors. The university has grown in importance, but it is no longer the centre of calm, cloistered scholarship. It is a focus of political and social unrest.

Germany is carrying on an experiment in the education of thousands who will never find an opportunity to use their university or engineering training as a means of livelihood. "What will be the result?" is a question that one hears on every hand. If a large number of the present generation of students will never find employment in their professions or vocations, one wonders whether the present system of highly specialized instruction is the one best suited to produce individual and national happiness.

The total number of students at present in the German universities and technical schools of the grade of universities amounts to 140,000. While the enrolment in the technical schools is declining slightly, the number in some of the universities is increasing and in others is stationary. It is estimated that there are 330,000 positions in Germany for which academic training is required, of which 10,000 are available yearly.

From the universities there come every year about 30,000 graduates. Therefore we may conclude that two-thirds of all who leave the universities have little hope of securing positions. This surplus of academically trained men is piling up every year, and it presents a social and economic and, possibly, a political problem of very grave importance. In 1914 there were 116 university students per 100,000 of population, while in 1930 the ratio had increased to 203.

I inquired frequently about the ability and the preparation of the present students. I was usually told "we have just as many good students as we have ever had, but a great many more incompetents." Apparently the country can supply only a certain number of students who really belong in universities. The others have been well prepared and are able to meet the technical requirements, but they are lacking in originality and initiative.

The students have never been more industrious or more serious in their efforts. They realize that the competition for positions is so keen that only the most faithful and most competent have any chance to succeed. I have the impression that their mood is not only serious but also somewhat cheerless. We must bear in mind that the present generation of students passed their early years during the war period. Their nerves and their general physical condition must have been affected by the events of their childhood.

Apart from their work their chief interest is in politics. I was surprised to learn from a former Minister that, in his opinion, from 75 to 80 per cent of the present university students are anti-capitalistic. They feel that the present capitalistic system is a failure and must be changed — although only a small number are Communists. Hitler has stirred their imagination and has fired their enthusiasm. Many of them are looking to him not only to save their country but also they base their hopes of earning a livelihood on the changes that he will make in governmental as well as in economic conditions.

Their enthusiasm for Hitler is partly spontaneous and partly inspired. His political lieutenants are supposed to have much to do with the disturbances that are continually breaking out in the universities. The students are happy to accept the commission

Hitlerism, Germany and Civilization

Some years ago, the great German thinker and prophet Oswald Spengler prophesied that Germany was to [illegible] age of the Caesars" descend upon her. "We shall not produce Goethe but we shall produce another Caesar," he said. How [illegible] words of Spengler in the light of Hitlerism which has [illegible] civilized and cultured "Deutschland."

Those of us who are aware of the psychology of the [illegible] face the reality of Hitlerism. It has come to stay for some [illegible] Germany and may even spread to other portions of Europe. How shall we characterize Hitlerism? Indeed it has almost become a religion, a mystical cult which has for its greatest doctrine the [illegible] tion of the "absolute state." Hitlerism means the negation of democracy, the denial of freedom of speech and the freedom of press and the negation of personal development. Hitlerism not only emphasizes the mystical state but with it goes a priesthood of militarism and a political and social philosophy that is aflame with passion and fanaticism. Hitler has come to look upon himself as the chosen Messiah who will be instrumental in restoring the glory of the Reich among the nations of the world.

While thinking people the world over may have no quarrels with Hitler's mission of bringing Germany back to a respectable position among the nations of the world, it nevertheless condemns the methods pursued in the realization of the mission. If Hitler thinks that he will gain position for Deutschland by besmirching his hands with Jewish blood, then the conscience of civilization will rise in revolt as it has already risen in protest against this barbarism.

It is good to observe that the organized religious forces of Germany have deliberately refused to fraternize with Nazism. They have even spoken with disfavour of this cult but the day seems to be near at hand when Hitler will bid for the church. But we trust that no such alliance will ever take place.

Hitlerism is a menace to civilization — it threatens the comradeship, the international idealism which we have succeeded in galvanising in recent years among the peoples of the earth. Hitlerist fanaticism, bias and exaggerated nationalism may yet spell the very destruction of all that is good and true in German culture and may even throw Europe into another war.

We Jews see in Hitlerism persecution of our people with the greatest of subtlety. Surely the Nazi will hesitate to make physical progroms upon Jews such as have been perpetrated by Czarism! No, not through "hooliganism" but through "legalism" and legal enactments have the Nazi resolved to crucify the Jews of Germany. Indeed there is a certain "refinement" in this form of persecution which has only accentuated the essential cruelty.

We Jews of the world have no quarrels with the German people of Schiller, of Goethe, Kant, Mendelsohn, Wagner, Heine and Einstein. But we arise in protest against the racial, bias and political program of a Nazi government which has set out to root out the Jew of the Reich.

And thus we turn to enlightened public opinion and especially to Christendom with the appeal that persecution of Israel in whatever form it exists in Germany be at once eradicated. We know that the conscience of civilization has already spoken and will continue to condemn the resurgence of barbarism which has swept Germany. Hitlerism presents a challenge to civilization and those who are civilized will never tolerate it. Especially to the church do we turn in this hour — the church which is about to usher in the Holy Year of homage and honour of that Jew of Galilee who proclaimed the message — "Love ye one another."

Is Democracy Declining?

How applicable is the message of Passover in the present hour! How important that we give emphasis to the moral ideal — "liberty" — which this historic feast proclaims!

The freedom which Israel won in ancient Egyptian days has to be won anew from time to time. It has been well said that "freedom is not a goal, but a process. It is not something that is given us. It is a quest. It is a process of becoming." Certainly in these distressful days the democratic ideals in many lands are threatened by the sinister forces of dictatorship. There is no doubt that a hysterical mood has taken hold of large portions of the world. The emotional atmosphere of war days is upon us and liberty seems to be on the decline

The Cruel Facts

Those who are of the opinion that conditions for the Jew in Ger... are not so intolerable as has been depicted in the general press ... do well to read Edgar Mowrer's letter in the spring issue of the ...ewish Journal. What cruel facts does Mr. Mowrer present regard... the plight and tragedy of the Jew in the Reich! Unbelievable and ...ime! The Nazis in their anti-Semitic propaganda of twelve years ... succeeded in poisoning the minds of the German masses. The lies ...hich were told about the Jew and which had been accepted first as ...ews are now beginning to stick. Increased poverty, hunger and un...employment have made the German people desperate. In their des...peration they seem to swallow all fictions and lies that the Nazi pro...pagandists have advertised concerning the "Jid." With the result that ...Germany is to-day a yeast-bed of racial hatred.

...owever the fire of fanaticism is raging in Germany. The bar... campaign of the Nazi will finally result in the departure of the ...Jews from the Reich. What has happened to Spain may yet happen ...to Germany if the Jew is exiled. Mr. Mowrer concludes his pain...ful letter as follows:

"Since the Germans lost the war, since they are poor and weary ...and saddened, since they believe themselves to be now a wronged ...and humiliated nation, the question arises, how could this come to ...pass? A people likes to admit its own failings. Where, therefore, could ...the responsibility be put if not on the Jew in their midst, the hateful ...alien body in the otherwise flawless German organism?

"In short, the suffering German hates the Jew rather than face ...the truth about himself."

Hitler's Religion

A startling and thought-provoking contribution is that of E. G. ...Gudmundsen in the Christian Century of March 29th on "Hitler ...German Religion." The author points out that from the few

In its place must ...come autocracy in Germany. The democratic principle must be rooted ...out of the social and political life of the German people. And that ...of course explains much of the anti-Semitic spirit which dominates ...Hitlerism. (Continued from page 5) to create a new patriotism, a new nationalism. They are happy to regard themselves as saviors of their country. Hitler's appeal to them has flattered their vanity and increased their importance in their own eyes. They enjoy the militant method of extending German kultur and the quasi military system — the uniforms, the discipline and the torrid rhetoric of their Nazi leaders.

The high handed methods which Hitler encourages, or at least, condones, are sometimes tragic in their results, and his influence has dealt a serious blow to academic freedom. No professor or lecturer is quite sure that some day he may not be the victim of the attacks of the students. When a new man is appointed to a university faculty his previous record is studied minutely, not only his scientific and intellectual accomplishments but such questions as these are asked: Is he inclined toward pacifism? Has he any leanings toward the point of view of an internationalist? And above all, is he a Jew?

If the answers to these questions are not satisfactory, a campaign against the new professor may be launched. There will be disturbances in his classroom, which sometimes, as in the case of Professor Cohn of Breslau, go as far as the introduction of tear gas and stink bombs. A number of men in recent years have been driven out, as was Cohn, by the activities of the students.

Recently fifteen young Nazis in uniform entered the State Art School in Berlin when an examination was in progress, seized the four professors who were in charge, carried them out into the street, then returned and nailed up the doors of their studios. After this episode the Nazi flag was hoisted on the Art School. The press bureau of the National Socialist Student Association issued an official statement on the occurrence and charged the four professors with holding Marxist-Communist views.

The responsibilities and anxieties of the rectors are now multiplied: they never know when an outbreak may occur; the protection of a professor who is the victim of the attacks of the students is sometimes beyond their power, and the discussions with the students in critical times are often humiliating.

Quite apart from the constraint that is caused by the continued fear of student demonstrations, there is the cramping effect upon academic life of the feeling that the universities have been forced to work for an intense form of nationalism. There was something significant in the fact that the flags on the University of Berlin were at half-staff at the time of the State funeral of one of Hitler's minor lieutenants. It will be recalled that on the evening of the day on which the present Chancellor was appointed a police officer and a follower of Hitler were killed. The new Cabinet decreed a State funeral in the Berlin Cathedral for these two unimportant people.

That the university was commanded to lower its flags on this occasion to half staff seemed to me a surrender of German scholarship and liberalism to an extreme form of party politics. The university must now take orders from above, from Hitler and his associates in the government, as well as undergo the pressure from below of the students.

In spite of many adverse conditions, research is being pursued as devotedly and possibly as effectively as ever. Some of the professors feel constrained, some humiliated, some alarmed, but they do not relax their efforts or lower their standards. Their salaries have been reduced, but on the whole their financial position is by no means bad. They complain that they cannot obtain sufficient money for equipment and supplies, but here and there one sees magnificent new laboratories with every possible adjunct to effective work.

Indeed, in spite of the permanent feverish spirit among students of Germany, much work is being done, especially in the fields of pure and applied science. Such an organization as the Kaiser Wilhelm-Gesellschaft which supports a group of laboratories in various parts of Germany devoted to research, which draws some of its funds from private individuals, is feeling the pinch of the hard times, but its work is proceeding with enthusiasm, and it is probably the greatest single agency for the advancement of pure science in the world.

Dahlem, the little suburb of Berlin where most of its research laboratories are assembled, is seemingly untroubled by the storms of nationalism which are sweeping over the country. It seems to realize Lord Bacon's dream of a company of scholars devoted to the pursuit of knowledge, which

It is a system that has produced prodigious monuments of scholarship and a large class of men with great erudition. But I am not certain that it is a system that creates joy in intellectual work.

Occasionally one hears a note of dissatisfaction from the university authorities. A recent speaker at the University of Munich said in a lecture: "There has grown up a certain tension between the people and the universities; there has been a decline in the influence of the universities upon the students themselves and upon the people in general. Scientific research is on a high plane and the organization of specialized instruction is on the whole satisfactory. Obvious mistakes have been made in the last decades.

"At the beginning of the century the universities adapted themselves to the spirit of the times. Zeitgeist instead of striving to direct it and to mold it. The natural sciences should have attempted to create a higher conception of life. Instead of this, a calculated, practical form of specialization split up education in the universities into narrow fields. The upper classes of the population, in spite of their admirable professional training, failed to gain the humanistic elements in their education that are desirable. The relieving of the tension between the people and the university must be accomplished through means that are intellectual. A philosophical superstructure, from which a religious element will not be omitted, that

In 1873 this policyholder bought an Ordinary Life Policy for $1,000.00 on which he was to pay a premium of $13.99 every year.

He arranged, however, to leave his dividends with us to apply against these premiums.

What happened as a result of his investment?

He has enjoyed sixty years of protection, for which he paid an average of $7.03 per year. His policy is now worth $348.90 in actual cash, which is $427.22 MORE THAN HE PAID IN PREMIUMS.

Policy No. 3310

This policyholder, in 1878, bought an Ordinary Life Policy for $1,000.00, on which he paid a premium of $18.46 yearly, leaving his dividends to accrue.

What happened as a result of his investment?

In 18 years his dividends mounted up to the point where they were sufficient to prepay all future premiums. He had paid in only $331.20. He has had full protection for 57 years. He has received $439.86 in cash dividends since his policy became paid up, and in addition his policy today has a cash value of $869.55. While it remains in force he will receive a cheque each year for his share of the surplus earnings of the Company.

TOSCANINI, BODANZKY AND 9 OTHERS PLEA FOR GERMAN ARTISTS

While Toscanini and ten other leading conductors and musicians sent Sunday, April 2, to Chancellor Adolf Hitler a cablegram appealing to him to put a stop to persecutions for political or religious reasons of their musical colleagues in Germany,

The message was sent as a result of reports coming to this country that Otto Klemperer, Bruno Walter and Fritz Busch had been maltreated by the Nazis, on Thursday Artur Bodanzky, Wagnerian conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, received a letter from friends in Hamburg reporting that Mr. Klemperer had been beaten by Hitlerites on the night after conducting Beethoven's Missa Solemnis. Mr. Klemperer until lately has conducted the State Opera Orchestra in Berlin.

When he heard that Mr. Bodanzky, Bethold Neuer, 121 West Fifty-seventh Street, vice president of the William Rapke Music Companies and other persons of prominence in the world of music were framing an appeal to Chancellor Hitler, Mr. Toscanini not only joined the movement but asked that his name be put first among those signing the message.

Mr. Toscanini's letter, written from his suite at the Astor on Friday, said:

My Dear Mr. Neuer:

Not only can you use my name, but if there is no objection and if it is possible I would like to have my name at the head of the subscribers of this message. Greetings and compliments from Arturo Toscanini.

Mr. Toscanini, conductor of the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, in heading the appeal to Chancellor Hitler risks whatever political displeasure may come upon him. He is under contract to direct the Wagnerian performances at the Bayreuth Festival in July. While friends expressed fears that the invitation might be revoked as a result of the message, he told his associates that he was "glad" he had spoken with his fellow musicians.

The cablegram to Chancellor Hitler follows:

Chancellor Hitler,
Berlin, Germany.

Your Excellency:

The undersigned artists, who live and execute their art in the United States of America, feel the moral obligation to appeal to your excellency to put a stop to the persecutions of their colleagues in Germany for political or religious reasons. We beg you to consider that the artist all over the world is entitled for his talent alone and not for his national or religious conditions.

Realizing [illegible] that these persecutions do take place in Germany at present are not based on authentic data and that it may possibly be your desire to do [illegible] without further delay, has been objected to by some of the above signers.

Hoping that this act on behalf of our colleagues may be allowed to pass without [illegible]

Respectfully,

Arturo Toscanini, Walter Damrosch, Frank Damrosch, Alexander Bodanzky, Artur Bodanzky, Josef Stransky, Josef Hofmann, Charles Martin Loeffler, Nicolai Sokoloff, Fabien Sevitzky, Albert Spalding.

Mr. Neuer, friend and associate of many of the musicians to whom the message, stated that the appeal was not based alone on report of indignity to Mr. Klemperer. He made public letters from Mr. Gabrilowitsch, conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, reporting friends in Vienna and Fritz Busch, and appeals to Mr. Toscanini to lead a protest.

The letter to Mr. Toscanini follows:

Maestro Arturo Toscanini
Hotel Astor,
New York, N. Y.
Dear Maestro:

Everybody is reading with horror and indignation of the recent brutal events in Germany. As you know, protest meetings are being held everywhere. Messages are being sent to Germany daily by organizations and private individuals expressing disapproval and criticism.

All these protests will remain without any appreciable result. They will not impress the tyrant who rules over the German nation. There is only one man who could protest effectively. That is you, Maestro Arturo Toscanini.

Two years ago (1931) when you left Bayreuth in disgust and anger you were reported in a newspaper interview as having expressed yourself sharply against Hitlerism. This year (1933) you are returning to Bayreuth when Hitlerism is at the climax of its triumph. Do you not think that this must be interpreted by the whole world as an expression of your approval of Hitlerism?

It is a mistake to regard Hitlerism merely as an anti-Jewish movement. That of course is only one side of it. Hitlerism is a mental attitude which advocates brute force against liberty. It is the worst side of Fascism. The outrages and insults to which you were subjected in Bologna two years ago are an example of that attitude.

When the Bologna incident happened, the musicians of the whole world expressed their indignation and their sympathy for you. At that time Koussevitzky refused

WHAT TORONTO FEDERATION DID LAST YEAR

(Report of the Executive Director delivered recently at the 18th Annual Meeting of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of Toronto)

By Martin M. Cohn

At this 18th birthday of Federation it is interesting to look back and trace the development of our present work from the early activities illustrated in the exhibits displayed on the walls here tonight. For the limited time that this report can take, however, the present is much more urgent. The developments that Federation passed through during 1932, and the problems which face us for 1933, are more interesting, and much more important.

It was decided this year not to have each constituent present a report at the Annual Meeting. Most of them have their own Annual Meetings and they are well able to speak for themselves. Some of the organizations have arranged displays, some of them have prepared brief reports of their activities which will be handed to you after the meeting.

Statistics are very difficult to deal with in such a report as this, and rather than confuse you by rhyming off strings of figures which you would have trouble in following, a complete copy of the Auditor's Report will be published later so that you can study it at your leisure.

I am not attempting to cover all the work of all our organizations. This report is rather a presentation of the most important developments in Federation's activities during 1932, and a discussion of the most important problems with which we are faced for 1933. The two most important developments occurred in our child welfare, and our Family Welfare, activities.

The Child Welfare work first.

For a long time our orphaned and neglected children, and our unmarried mothers, were cared for most competently by the Jewish Children's Home and the Maternity Aid Society. The growth in this work during the past few years, however; the increase in the number of children who were cared for in foster homes; and the increase in the number of children made wards of the Children's Aid Society under the Provicial Children's Protection Act, made some changes necessary. So representatives of the Jewish Children's Home and the Maternity Aid Society met with the Federation; after a study of the situation, the new Jewish Children's Bureau was set up to coordinate all child welfare activities. The Jewish Children's Home and the Maternity Aid Society now carry on their activities in co-operation with the Bureau. Through the enthusiasm and hard work of the representatives of these organizations and the new Board of the Bureau child welfare work is showing splendid progress.

The formation of the Jewish Children's Bureau relieved the Maternity Aid Society of some responsibility; and I would like to go beyond the limits of this report of 1932 to say that the Maternity Aid Society are now reorganizing another important activity. They are drawing together many societies who give special Pesach relief to needy families; are organizing this work to prevent overlapping; and are securing cash instead of baskets. As a result of this work our families, in spite of the much greater number, will be better cared for this coming Pesach.

The organization of the Jewish Children's Bureau meant changes for the Big Sisters also, as their professional worker was transferred to the new Bureau, and it was some time before a new Big Sister worker could be arranged. However, the Big Sisters were most co-operative in helping to carry out these changes.

Both the Big Sisters and Big Brothers, with capable trained workers, and two of the most active and efficient Boards in Federation, are carrying on a splendid and most necessary piece of work.

Now the other important change — in our Family Welfare work.

The Family Welfare Bureau had always been regarded as a part of Federation itself, and its affairs had been considered by the Executive Committee. During the past two years, however, the Executive Committee and the Board of Trustees were finding their time more and more taken up with general financial and Federation matters. Meanwhile the activities of the Family Welfare Bureau were increasing by leaps and bounds. So a new Family Welfare Board has been organized, which can give its full attention to this difficult task of providing service for the increasing number of families who are coming to us for help. The Family Welfare Bureau is being set up as a separate constituent of Federation.

It is only ... we have a staff of trained ... workers that we are able ... receive the large city grants ... make it possible for us ... on our work.

To help us further in our ... ily Welfare work we asked a large number of Societies to appoint representatives to a Committee which is to discuss this work. The meeting of this Committee has been delayed as some societies have not yet sent us the names of their delegates; but we hope that a meeting can be arranged in the next few weeks.

While all these changes have been going on, our Boys' Club and Girls' Club have been quietly carrying on their work of character building, in face of serious obstacles. Their registration is 50% greater than it was in 1930, but they are receiving only half the money they received in that year. It would be a sad day for the Jewish community if it were found necessary to turn the more than 2,000 young people registered in these Clubs loose in the streets. The money spent on all our Boys' and ~~Girls'~~ work is only a small percentage of our total budget. It is really trifling compared to the results gained by giving these boys and girls a chance to be away from the tension and barrenness of their homes, a chance to play and play in Jewish surroundings.

As Jews we have always experienced spiritual more than merely material things. Our greatest Rabbis went without food, and drink, and shelter, for the sake of feeding their spirit with the word of the Law. Our Boys' and Girls' Clubs develop the character, the spirit, of our boys and girls. I know from first hand experience that our Boys' Club has an intensely Jewish programme. Surely then, it would be going against our Jewish tradition to curtail this work for this work of feeding the spirit, rather than the body, is in accordance with the most sacred of Jewish tradition.

It is indeed a tragedy that our summer camps could not during the past summer be carried on properly. We owe a debt of gratitude to the Mothers' and Babies' Rest Home and to the Bnai Brith, that through their own efforts they were able to keep at least 2 of the camps open.

Now a word as to our finances. The most difficult financial problem is that of securing funds to provide relief to our normal families. Since January of this year we expended ... and ... of these ... we raised ... but ... fallen ... which ... [illegible] ... rejected ... [illegible] ... [illegible] ... [illegible]

TOSCANINI, BODANZKY AND 9 OTHERS PLEA

add my signature. In other words, I am not prompted by considerations of expediency or cowardice. You probably remember the violent protest which I made ten years ago during the French invasion of the Ruhr district in Germany, a protest which was widely commented upon in French and German newspapers as well as in the American press. Many people thought me a Don Quixote, but I am glad and proud I did it.

Again, two years ago, when the Toscanini incident happened in Bologna, I expressed myself in an open letter to the newspapers and violently denounced Mussolini. On top of that, I took a trip from Switzerland to Milan to call on Toscanini personally and express my sympathy to him. That trip, coming on top of the publishing of my letter, might have easily resulted in my arrest and deportation from Italy, but I was again willing to take the consequences.

All this is a digression from the main subject of my letter but I have found it necessary to inject it so that my remarks may not be misconstrued.

I am now coming to the main point of my letter. While ten of the names which I mentioned a while ago would mean nothing to Hitler, there is one name which would mean everything. That name belongs to a man who is known, revered and respected in Germany as he is elsewhere. It is a name at the sound of which Mr. Hitler would "sit up and take notice." I mean, of course, no other than Arturo Toscanini.

There is only one thing which could impress the world at the present time, and that is if Toscanini would announce in an open letter that he refuses to direct the festival in Bayreuth next summer. Such an announcement would be like a bombshell. In fact, I do not know of anything else that could emanate from anyone that would have a similar effect.

Two years ago, when Toscanini left Bayreuth, he expressed himself as disgusted with conditions there and particularly emphasized that he was not in sympathy with Hitler and Hitlerism. I remember reading about this in "The New York Times," as well as in several other papers. If Toscanini still feels that way about Hitler, now is the moment to show it. It is a well known fact that the present inhabitants of Wahnfried are close personal friends and admirers of Hitler. For Toscanini to go to Bayreuth at the present time would be equivalent to an indorsement of Hitlerism.

There is yet another reason why Toscanini should act in this matter. Two years ago, at the time when he was installed at the hands of the Italian Fascists, virtually all the prominent orchestra conductors in Europe and America expressed their indignation publicly in some way or other. Rabaud went so far as to cancel [illegible] engagement at the Skala [illegible]

A most courageous act [illegible] part of Rabaud; since [illegible] it would probably shut the [illegible] Italy to him forever.

At the same time Artur [illegible] also went to Milan and p[illegible] presented his respects to [illegible] This was a courageous act [illegible] capital's house was under [illegible] surveillance and every one [illegible] it was subject to suspicion.

This and many other things [illegible] done for the sake of Toscanini [illegible] years ago. I believe that [illegible] his turn to do something [illegible] other colleagues of his [illegible] Bruno Walter and Fritz [illegible] have been insulted by the [illegible] Fascists.

I am putting all this quite [illegible] in my letter to you today because I want you to discuss [illegible] Bodanzky. He knows [illegible] well and is in a position to [illegible] him freely. However, if he [illegible] reason, does not wish to [illegible] single-handed, I would suggest [illegible] several of us conductors write a letter to Toscanini and present the plan to him. In that case I am only too glad to sign my name.

Cordially yours,

Ossip Gabrilowitsch.

P. S. I wish to add this. If [illegible] presenting the facts to Toscanini he should nevertheless decline to cancel his Bayreuth engagement then he should at least be induced to join his signature with the other conductors included in Bodanzky's plan. With Toscanini's signature a letter to Hitler such as Bodanzky has devised may not be entirely without effect. Without Toscanini it would be an empty shell.

Sponsors of the cablegram of appeal were frankly puzzled at the scope of the Nazi actions, which they deemed hostile to music. They said that the followers of Hitler had drawn apparently not only religious but political lines in their unusual manifestations of a narrow nationalism. Busch, conductor of the Dresden Opera, is of Aryan stock, yet he appears to have been cordially disliked.

On March 8 Dresden dispatches reported that uniformed Nazis "booed" him down as he was conducting a performance of "Rigoletto." A petition recently was drawn by a majority of the opera personnel terming him "artistically unqualified" and requesting that he be prevented from returning to the opera. Bruno Walter's concerts were banned and he is reported now in Amsterdam, saddened by the results of reported Nazi discrimination.

These two great nations of lat... ter days subscribed to her opin... ion. But where the French were ... more correct than the Germans, is ... in their understanding that not ... victory on the battle field secures ... the future of a nation, but the ... power to resist any foreign on... slaught, and to recuperate swift... ly after any foreign invasions ... and depredations. And this pow... er can only be achieved if the ... nation has the stamina to ... time to pursuit of knowledge ... even in its higher forms ... no ... matter what happens in the out... side world.

Israel always possessed this ... remarkable spiritual power, and ... here we find the secret of Israel's ... survival, and his coming always ... out the stronger after all the ... trials and tribulations showered ... upon him by an inscrutable and ... relentless destiny.

The voice of Torah would never ... be silenced. Our homes of learn... ing, the schools and academies ... never had cause to complain of ... the lack of students. He who is ... conversant with conditions in ... post-war Europe, must most of ... all envision with amazement the ... fact that East European Jewry ... outside of Bolshevist Russia ... succeeded in spite of famine, ma... sacres, and unimaginable horrors ... to keep their Yeshivos intact.

We in America employ ... our Talmud Torahs and religious ... schools. We try to give our chil... dren some Jewish education, but ... we cannot free ourselves from the ... belief that the scattering ... of these schools is largely ... due to the fact that ... make the Jewish mind and heart ... impregnable against the ... mighty religious and cultural ... streams that engulf everything ... around us.

We built ... monu... ments. Their ... great credit ... American ... ness, and ... lost ... most of the desire and yearning ... to preserve Judaism. This is cer... tain. But can Judaism be saved results obtain grants from the city; but these grants must necessarily be limited, and we could not hope to provide sufficient funds to make up the difference. So the question we must have to answer in the next few months is

If the House of Industry can supply our families with the food they need, with kosher food, should we continue to try to look after all the families ourselves, and not give them sufficient. Or should we allow the families to go to the House of Industry it they can get kosher food so that they will get sufficient regular provisions. Then Federation funds could be used for other purposes. It would not be necessary for the Family Welfare Bureau to run up large accounts with the grocers and butchers; and as I said before the families would get regular, and perhaps more adequate, provisions.

Some of the clients of the Family Welfare Bureau say they would rather go there. This report does not make any recommendations on either way. It simply asks you to think the situation over carefully, because we may have to make a definite decision one way or the other, in the near future.

There is another possible solution to this problem, and that is for the Jewish community to give us sufficient funds to meet those overdue pledges which still have not been paid.

While these financial matters are of the utmost importance, money is not the root of all our troubles; nor would merely getting more money solve all our problems. Unless we have a group of interested volunteers as Board members of our constituents and Trustees of Federation, our work will be always hampered. With a group of interested board members, trustees, and officers, we can accomplish a great deal even without adequate funds. So we ask the community, even more than for financial support, for moral support, for personal assistance in bearing the heavy responsibilities involved in carrying on Federation, which now fall upon a very few.

May I, in closing, express our deep appreciation to all who helped us to carry on our activities. These friends, both individuals and organizations, are too many to mention.

There is one, however, who on this occasion especially should be mentioned. Mr. Edmund Bristol our Honorary President, whose splendid example of courage and devotion has been an inspiration to many of us, and has helped us carry on during this very trying year.

Case History of Family Welfare Bureau of Toronto Federation

By Florence Hahn

The woman stood on the verandah and the ... streamed down her face. ... three children huddled ... her and their rooms, ... these reflected their ... misery, their stomachs ... empty, their hands and ... were cold, and they were ... afraid that nothing the ... lord had furnished them ... their two furnished ... kept their clothes, and ... fused to open the door ... their rent was paid. For ... hours they had walked ... streets in search of a ... to spend the night. No ... would take them in without ... money. They returned to ... former rooms, hoping ... the landlord's heart had ... ened. It had not.

A neighbour reported the family's straitened ... to the Family Welfare Bureau and a worker immediately went to their assistance. After much persuasion the landlord consented to allow the family to sleep in their rooms for that night, but stated that on the next day he would demand his rent. Fortunately, a large check came to the office of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies on that day, and a small part of it went to pay the rent for the 5's who are now safe for another month.

by a handful of trained men who, as professionals, can be engaged only by wealthy or at least well to do congregations?

"Moses commanded us a law, An inheritance of the congregation of Jacob."

Jewish learning and Jewish knowledge cannot be confined as in Egypt of old to a small cast of Priests. Even in Israel where a whole tribe was appointed as guardians of the Torah, it was not the Priests, but the laymen prophets who made Judaism what it is today.

The greatest tragedy of the modern Jewish youth is the dualism in his soul; the struggle within him between traditions of his home and synagogue, and the influences he absorbs in the schools where his character is to be moulded and formed.

As a solution to all these baffling problems, a group of men and women in New York City, with the support they received from many others all over the country, built up gradually — in the face of innumerable difficulties and hardships, a block of educational institutions, where a great number — hundreds and even thousands of our young should be able to receive a full and complete Jewish and general education, in a purely Jewish atmosphere and environment.

They built, as the centre of their educational system, the time honored Jeshiva, where a maximum of Jewish learning and knowledge is dispensed, not only to those who intend to become Rabbis in Israel, but also to hundreds of boys from all over the country, whose soul yearns to a fuller knowledge and understanding of Judaism. To this they added a public school and a high school. The last institution being the only Jewish high school on the continent, and what is more remarkable is the fact that the pupils, notwithstanding imposing number of Heb- ject included in the cu- hold the highest stan- scholarship in the State York.

War is an expensive way to settle disputes, so put it away. There are other ways of settling problems than by fighting. War can be stopped just by your refusal to fight. For example if the inhabitants in both countries which were waging war refused to fight there couldn't possibly be a war. In time we shall be of a voting age and then we shall elect for our government the best representatives. We shall put in positions the ones opposed to war — the ones that will aid us in our struggle for peace. Why should we invest our money in clumsy battleships? Why not in trading vessels that will bring us more prosperity and rid us of our many financial troubles better known to us as the depression. Not only our battleships but our airships used for war purposes let us use them for scientific experiments. ## YOUTH AND WORLD PEACE

In every movement that spells progress in the history of civilization, it was always youth who were in the front ranks. Students, especially in Europe, were usually the agitators who began reforms of all kinds.

It is natural for youth in their enthusiasm, and desire to right wrongs, to plunge themselves into new movements. Revolutions have come about through the agitations of youth; and fiery zeal seems to die down in old age.

It is youth not greybeards, who wage war, therefore it should be youth who should bring about the greatest reform in history, and one that will have the most far-reaching effects on humanity; namely-'PEACE'.

It was said that after the Franco-Prussian Wars, there was a diminution in the population of France. It has also been proved by the writings of ex-soldiers, that nerv-

YOUTH AND WORLD PEACE

History may be studied from two extremely opposite viewpoints. The first method consists of studying immediate events, and then taking note of their direct results. There is however, quite another phase of history. It is that of noticing what seem to be relatively unimportant events, and linking their indirect consequences to form a chain which embodies great importance. This may be referred to as studying history perspectively.

There is no better incident to demonstrate this, than the seemingly unimportant founding of a small school by Jochanan ben Zakkai during Rome's campaign against Jerusalem, which ended with the destruction of the Temple. In itself, it embodied little. Taken in perspective, however, it looms as the one important factor that ultimately perpetuated Jewish learning and thought. Had that great scholar not had the foresight to visualize that his small "Chedar" would keep the spirit of Judaism alive, perhaps we today would not be enjoying our freedom of personal thought.

The peace problem today in its many varied forms, presents an issue of great moment. And all problems, whether great or small should be dealt with with an eye to the future. Foresight alone, can save our civilization, which ... today seems to be on the verge of ... way. And for what reason? Merely because the statesmen of a few years ago decided that a great war would benefit the nations economically. At that time, in 1914, the world was in the throes of an economic depression very similar to our own today. And we must suffer for their lack of foresight. It the problem still remains, how may we prevent a repetition of such a war, and enable nations to attain the heights of brotherhood, when the common good will make for greater harmony and peace.

To promote a better understanding between nations and people, the youth of the land, which eventually will become its leaders and statesmen, must be educated. But how, the question arises. The logical reply is to educate youth with an eye to the future. Today, this teaching may have little or no effect, but in the years to come — may we prophesy — the youth of the country, which is in reality its vibrant cog, will ultimately do away with war and its accompanying horrors.

To educate the child to think in terms of peace, and to try to reach a better understanding with his neighbour, entails far more effort than would at first appear. There are a great many problems facing those who wish to see the younger spirit of the land made fully cognizant of War, and what it embodies — spiritually as well as physically.

Sadly enough our schools, rather than aiding, are perhaps unwittingly, hindering this aim. The child, when studying history, is informed about the many wars that have taken place — the recent great war particularly — and gains an entirely false impression of the meaning of War.

The child is told about the heroic battles and victories accomplished by his compatriots; how men received medals for valor unparalleled; how these same men sacrificed their lives to make the world "safe for democracy;" and lastly, how a great number of heroic nurses went "Over There" to help; and from this education, the child gradually comes to believe wars are only the dictates of a fine and upright chivalry.

But this child is not told how these self same soldiers and heroes had to toil bitterly through mud, and dirt, and slime, receiving little or no rest, perhaps eventually having a merciful bullet or shell send him back to the base hospitals for relief, or sometimes to his eternal reward. The child is not told how, literally millions upon millions were sacrificed to the Great God War — merely to satisfy the whim of some statesmen and generals to cover themselves with a halo of glory — and only succeeded in creating an aurora of gold about their distinguished persons.

John Erskine, one of America's thinkers, recently said, "The dreadful thing about war is this, that nothing in peace gives you so much the sense of being alive. Until pacifism reckons with this fact, we shall have wars—" This is perhaps the greatest of all problems facing the world at present. When a youngster sees a military parade he feels the deep joy in those brave men marching along so keenly, horns tooting and their drums tattooing "Glory" over them all, and he jumps and shouts and cheers them on, inwardly resolving, that should opportunity afford, he would join the army and see the world.

Yet this youngster is not shown the veterans of the war, once promising youths like himself, making buttons and tags to gain a livelihood and keep their crippled bodies and souls together. Those men at Bellevue, who do work with their mouths, because they have lost their arms and legs; those men in the streets looking for work of any nature; some of these men even stopping their more fortunate comrades, with the plea "Brother, can you spare a dime." These boys represent the deep degradation of the so-called "Americana," replete with modernity, and yet unable to provide for men whose lives they have all too fully ruined. And we considered the Red Indians of the North American continent as being barbarians. It would seem that for futile barbarism, we have outdone them only too well.

One of our prominent economists only recently remarked that "If war were declared today, suddenly everyone would have a job." Taking into consideration all the aspects of our present condition, everything seems to point to a complete readjustment of affairs, and we do not find it difficult to predict a war of wars in the very near future — if definite measures are not taken immediately.

Our dictionary gives us a rather upsetting definition for the word "patriot," for it states that a patriot is "one who loves and is vered to his native country and its welfare." Witness then, the shock of everyone — Einstein in particular — when they were informed that a certain womans' patriotic club in the United States, wished to refuse the great scientist entrance because he was "A greater Communist than Stalin," and all because of the fact that Einstein advocated a policy of peace.

Jewish Community

AND HIS WINDSOR HOTEL ORCHESTRA

Another great barrier placed in the path of those endeavoring to educate youth in the principals of peace, is the effects of wartime propaganda — and it may be said here, that it is still greatly felt.

Take for example, a scene in a school on Armistice Day. The mental process of any child's mind — could it be psychoanalized, would probably elicit the following — "Gee! war must be a great thing. If it were not for all those soldiers, we wouldn't have a holiday now. I'll bet when I grow up, I'm going to be a great soldier, and wear one of those swell uniforms too. Boy, that would be great!"

And that in short, presents a problem that is well nigh without solution. If however, the present generation has the foresight enough to educate its children, perhaps the forcoming generations may reap the benefit of present day labor. As it is, we can only bow our heads and pray, "Grant us peace, Thy most precious gift, O Thou eternal source of peace, and enable Israel to be a messenger of peace unto the peoples of the earth . . . . ."

THE CONTRIBUTION OF LITERATURE TO WORLD PEACE

The theme, "Contribution of Literature to World Peace," which I have chosen is rich in subject matter sufficient to fill a volume. The limitations of space make my attempts at best a mere summary of the most important literary productions in that field of endeavor.

By the term literature, I mean to express the significant writings on World Peace after the World War.

In the history of contemporary civilization we may discern a remarkable phenomenon. A new temper in the world to-day is beginning to show itself most clearly — that of supposing war as a vast illusion and a tragic joke. We find excellent illustrations of this point of view in the Drama, the Novel, and the Poetry.

Let us first turn to the Drama. It enables us to visualize much more closely the horror of war — how the soldiers, who fought in the trenches felt. All this is well expressed in that great play, "Journey's End." It is about the only one depicting war life so clearly. In it we see how men reacted to the World War — in four different ways. First, how the young lieutenant met it; he cried, feigned illness, or tried to run away from it. That type of man was held at the front only by the death penalty hanging over him, in the form of the captain's revolver. Secondly, men met war as the Captain did. He drank till he was blind to the horrors of war thus, not perceiving the agony that might have destroyed him. Thirdly, it was met as Trotter did, devoid of nerves, no imagination, knowing nothing of beauty and, therefore, of horror. He was untouched by anything that happened. Lastly, war was met as Osborne, by a discipline of spirit which conquers fear and glorifies despair.

"Journey's End" teaches more than this. It reveals to us the futility of war. Another play, the appeal of which is almost as strong is "What Price Glory." These plays dealt not with horror, blood or agony. The former showed a group of men, whom we might take as but an atom of all the armies on either side. These men ate, slept, loafed, played; they laughed, cried, fought and died. All for what? This question is well answered in the empty stage at the end of the play — when the dug-out is blown to pieces and the men are all dead or dying. Is this our Journey's End; is this the price of glory? The emptiness, the tragedy — that men should pay so much for nothing.

More massive than any other group of war literature is that of

The soldiers, who were quiet for a while after the war, now expressed their views on their experiences.

The most forceful expression is "Dulce" in Repentance. "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "The Road Back" In the latter we find the ultimate results of the war — the disillusionment, the frustration of hopes. When the soldier returned to his home from the trenches there was actually no returning. He found himself a stranger — he could not fit into his former mode of living. His youth had died. He returned old and weary in spirit though young in years. Those at home could never understand or even imagine the years of horror that lay between them.

In the former poem we see how the soldiers in the trenches quite [illegible] those whom they must face as had a chance to hate. They had to kill friends or even brothers. What Because of war the demand of one's country is [illegible]

The Case of Sergeant Grischa by Arnold Zweig and Robert Graves' Good Bye to all that also reveal the true picture of war and its stark realities.

Before the war was well over Bernard Shaw and G. Lowes Dickinson had written eloquently upon the subject of the Great War and what they considered a cause for the great tragedy which might well have destroyed the Allies. During the war there was very little such literature produced. We were too busy seeing in purely Germans, believing she alone was responsible for the great misfortune.

Until the Great War poetry was especially fervent in the expression of patriotism. The glory of dying for one's country was the ideal. Now however there is an entirely different attitude. Instead of glorifying war poets to-day denounce it. There are numerous forceful messages of universal peace in poetry. It seems to me, that as an outstanding example of such literature showing the terror, the horror, the hopelessness and the despair brought in the wake of war, Seigfried Sassoon's poem may well be given here:

grown up matters, you will be able to understand. Then, when you do hear grown ups talking about things you ought to understand now, and you will surely be interested in and understand five years from now, listen, and form opinions of your own. The time will come soon enough when you will have to think for yourself.

However far games may seem from world peace, they too have their part. In the Olympics where representatives from every country get together they meet in sporting competition and learn to understand each other.

Do you know a little French girl living around the corner, or a German girl who lives across the road? If they have lately come to Canada, very likely some of your methods seem silly to them, and you probably wonder why they do certain things. If this is true, make friends, and explain why you do such things. Ask them to explain what they do. You will probably find, that, after all, what they do is not as silly as it seems. They, in turn, will not find you as proud and foolish as they at first thought you at first. We must consider both sides of the question before we make a decision.

While we are children we should learn to understand other countries, and do all we can to make other countries understand us. It is from misunderstanding that many wars are started.

Don't be content with doing what you alone can do to help promote World Peace. Interest your school friends and playmates in it, and make them so interested in it that they will tell others. The next time you can choose your own subject for a composition or essay choose this subject. (It will interest many people.)

Has this ever happened to you? Jane Smith, the girl who lives next door, said something that you did not like at that time. You started a quarrel about it. Before the quarrel has been going on for very long, you realize that what she says is true, or else you get so heartily tired of the quarrel that you wish Jane would come over and make up, but as both of you are too proud to be the first to make up, and the quarrel goes on for involves more people than of your intended at first.

So it is with many countries war often starts by some p... hap, and before they be... fighting for long more ... are concerned in it than ... country bargained for at th... sides usually are tired of ... long and see that the quar... easily have been settled ... simpler method. If, before ... was started, both sides ... sidered the cost (of a war) ... money and in men, there ... no wars.

So it is with countries ... country helps another when ... can, they will be firm friends ... the rest of time. If you know ... one of power, tell them what ... think and get them to be ... done. Too many of the ... common people do not pay ... attention to politics ... they think they can do ... about them. The word war does not conjure up before them a lurid picture of wounded and dying sufferers, moaning in muddy fields and the sound of falling bombs, no indeed! They picture instead the blare of trumpets and waving of flags as soldiers march proudly out of their home towns, with smiling faces, although many of them are treading on home soil for the last time. Youthful imaginations are stirred annually by the sight of men who are put on parade because they slaughtered millions of men whom they had never seen before; every military decoration displayed by those men is a symbol and reminder of ghastly destruction, yet they are cheered by huge crowds every Armistice Day, a day which should engender peace in every human heart. Military parades and exhibitions should be abolished entirely, they are a menace to the cause of world peace and a reminder of a past which should be obliterated.

Another unnecessary reminder of warfare is found in all modern schools where children are taught to honour and respect each general who was able, by strategy or skill to destroy the lives of thousands of soldiers who were innocent of any crime but warfare. To secure world peace this method of instruction needs definitely changing. Instead of learning about the achievements of generals who are dead, pupils should learn the other side; they should be taken to visit a place like the hospital at Saint Anne's, to learn by actually seeing for themselves the ravages that war leaves on humanity. The sight of men who are cripples, maimed for life, is a concrete and living example of the grimness of war which would create a definite impression upon the mind of a child, and which would sponsor hatred for war, the cause of the ruination of these lives. Youth, upon whom peace depends, should be taught to hate war from childhood, when they are easily impressed, by ideas, and which they generally cling to in later life.

The present cry for disarmament is a step in the direction of peace, but nothing definite has yet been established, because every country is afraid to trust her neighbour, because the spirit of peace has not been engendered in the blood of those who have the power to command the situation! If youth the world over would object and refuse to partake in warfare then peace would be permanently established, but the attitude of peace must be carefully cultivated from the earliest possible moment, before the imagination has been stirred by thrilling accounts of bravery on the battlefield. A child who is brought up on the principles of peace will continue to follow these principles throughout his whole life. Then indeed shall the world portray the primary meaning of peace, which is wealth and prosperity and will be a happier place to live in, for "no wars, but peace can hold blessing

In commenting on the [illegible] the Torah passage, dealing with the giving of the Ten Commandments to the people, "Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob and speak to the children of Israel" (Exodus, chapter 19, verse 3), the Rabbis explain the following laws: "Thus shall thou say to the house of Jacob" this refers to the women; God said unto Moses: Tell them the principles that they are able to understand. Speak to the children of Israel this refers to the men; God said to Moses: Tell them the minutiae which they are able to understand. Why first to the women? Because they are more scrupulous in observing the commandments. Further, because they will instruct their children in the law.

The legend that the Hebrew language was first given to the women is motivated by the following considerations: Women, as a class, are more zealous and conservative in ceremonial practices. This is readily understandable. One of the outstanding excellences of Judaism has been its stressing of the importance of family life. Home observances therefore enjoy to a considerable degree the attention of the Jewish legislator. Since woman is queen in her own domain, and since she has proved herself much more disposed to be alert, more responsive to the religious appeal, the legend [illegible] naturally gives her precedence.

were placed on or below the category of cattle, prostitutes, and the like — this is the glory of Jewish womanhood. As the clouds of oppression began to lift, Jewesses soon showed their native ability in all fields of culture; they became artists, singers, poets. Their salons are said to have produced a Heine, a Schelling, a Goethe. Moses Mendelssohn, the forerunner of the modern period of Jewish enlightenment, pointed to his wife, Vogel, as the paragon of all womanly virtues. Without her, he maintained, he could have accomplished nothing.

"The wonderful and mysterious preservation of the Jewish people," writes a scholar, "is due to the Jewish woman. This is her glory, not alone in the histdry of her own people, but in the history of the world."

YEAR OF EXODUS PUT AT 1447 B. C.

Bases Calculation on Jordan Valley Discoveries

The second revelation made by Sir Charles Marston, the Biblical archaeologist, in regard to Biblical data in the light of the latest discoveries in the Jordan Valley, fifteen miles northeast of Jerusalem, is even more revolutionary than the first. It concerns the setting back from 1276 B. C. to 1447 B. C. the date of the Exodus, thereby coordinating many scientific results of New Criticism with the text of the Old Testament.

Sir Charles's calculations are based on the discoveries made by Professor John Garstang, formerly Director of Antiquities to the Palestine Government, whose party of excavators he is financing. His first demolished the legend in regard to Jericho, that after Joshua had marched his Israelite troops with trumpets blowing seven times around the city the walls collapsed from the vibrations (Joshua ii, 8). Sir Charles, from the excavations made by Professor Garstang, was able to conclude that an earthquake had caused the walls to fall, although there was evidence that the city had been burned by invaders at different periods.

One of the principal obstacles to the acceptance of the Exodus story by the New Criticism was the religious postulate that the records were made by contemporaries of the events described. This postulate was attacked by the New Criticism on the conjecture that the Jews of the time of Moses could not write, although more recent investigations proved that Egyptians were using hieroglyphics, Babylonians cuneiform characters and Hittites ideographs at a much earlier period.

All this invited the following alternative: Either the flight from Egypt under Moses took place at a much later period than that assigned by Hebrew scholars and Christian theologians or the records were written several centuries after the events they describe and hence could not be entirely trustworthy. So Sir Ernest Budge set the date of Exodus in the thirteenth century B. C., if the records of it were to be credited to contemporaries. Hence the importance to both science and religion of fixing the date of the Exodus at exactly 400 years earlier.

A communication from Cairo to the British Museum shows that the Garstang-Marston deductions have the complete support of Professor Percy Edward Newberry of the University of Egypt, but in England, as letters to the papers reveal, the same support is not accorded by any of the parties between which the new date would seem to pave the way to mutual agreement.

Two typical letters appeared in The London Times: One is from A. E. Rawlinson of The College, Durham, sustaining the ancient contention of the Fundamentalists that archaeological discoveries, however authentic, cannot change the "Divine Word;" the other, from Dr. W. F. Lofthouse, Handsworth College, Birmingham, who says that while "Biblical scholars have no wish to underrate the evidence of archaeology" the evidence of Sir Charles, particularly his identification of Sinai with Serabit, "is far from certain."

Sir Charles passes over the first, but has a few words to reply to the second:

"The Temple of Serabit in Sinai, which was especially adorned by Hatshepsut and Thotmes III, contains such evidence of Israelite worship, as set forth in the Pentateuch, that it is impossible to disregard the connection," he says. "There in Sinai itself are standing stones such as Jacob set up at Bethel. There at the Temple of Serabit is the system of ceremonial ablutions. There are also the ashes of the sacrifices, vast heaps of them in a country where fuel is so scarce. And there is a system of writing in common use by Semitic workmen at the very period of the Israelite oppression, and at the very time the Exodus took place.

"My evidence for the identification of Hatshepsut as the patroness of Moses rests upon the new chronology. In the light of the Jericho discoveries the Bible dates so dovetail into Egyptian history that they greatly favor that conjecture.

"Dr. Lofthouse's assertion that the lapses of Israel from monotheism had nothing to do with the Temple of Serabit is of course, a matter of opinion. But Sir Flinders Petrie, after excavating the Temple, wrote:

"'We see how much of Mosaism was a carrying on of older ritual, how that movement was a monotheistic reformation of existing rites, and how the paganism of the Jews was but the popular retention of more than was granted in the State religion.'"

As hundreds of letters of all sorts have appeared in the press and as some of these are based on neither scientific nor theological erudition, Sir Charles has been impelled to issue a "popular" explanation of the discoveries and their meaning. This reads in his simple, unadorned language as follows:

"It now seems clear that the Book of Exodus must have been written by contemporary writers, and also that when Moses led the Israelites to Sinai he was treading familiar ground. When Sir Flinders Petrie made a series of excavations in the Sinaitic Peninsula, he found that from the dawn of their history the Egyptians had sent periodic expeditions to work the turquoise mines there. Conclusive evidence was found during the excavations that the mines had been worked by a Semitic race, and one point suggested by the new dating is that the Israelites themselves may have worked there during their captivity. It must be remembered, however, that there were other Semites as well as the Hebrews.

"Near by was found the wonderful Semitic temple of the goddess Serabit. Pharaohs of many dynasties had contributed to the building of this great Semitic sanctuary, but by far the most prominent of them all was Queen Hatshepsut, whose name is always associated with that of her nephew Thotmes III. The revised chronology necessitated by the discoveries at Jericho suggests that Hatshepsut was the Princess who found the baby Moses in the bullrushes of the Nile, so that the connection with the Sinai temple becomes of startling significance.

"Moses was the favorite of Hatshepsut and would almost certainly have visited the mine on the Queen's behalf. As a Semite he would be well acquainted with the worship of the sanctuary and he may well have influenced Hatshepsut to revive the worship of Serabit.

"Sir Flinders Petrie proved that the whole system of worship at this temple was not Egyptian at all but closely resembled the worship of the Israelites, as exemplified first by the Tabernacle in the wilderness and later by the Temple at Jerusalem. There was the same elaborate system of ablutions, and the immense accumulations of ashes found on the site testified to the vast number of sacrifices that had taken place. Sir Flinders considers that when Moses asked the Pharaoh to allow the Israelites to go three days' journey into the wilderness this temple was meant.

"Further, it seems now that after Moses fled from Egypt to Midian, on the death of Hatshepsut, the turquoise mines more or less fell into disuse. During his exile, of course, Moses gave up the old gods and returned to the faith of his fathers. Study of the Temple of Serabit, with its many statuettes and tables engraved on the rocks in Semitic characters, leads us to the positive conclusion that the lapses of Israel from monotheism which took place from time to time was a reversion to the more heathen type of worship of Serabit. It also affords definite evidence that a system of writing was in use among those who worked at the mines.

"The principal obstacle to the acceptance of the Old Testament narrative as being written by contemporaries was the alleged inability of the Israelites to have written records at the time of Moses. The Egyptians were then using hieroglyphics and the Babylonians cuneiform characters, so that the earlier books of the Bible have been ascribed to a much later date. The definite fixing of the date of the Exodus, however, makes it clear that the Israelites could write, and thus affords valuable evidence to support the belief that the earlier books of the Bible are by contemporary writers."

THOUSANDS IN TORONTO AND ONTARIO PROTEST PERSECUTIONS IN GERMANY

...t Hitler and his followers ...ma...wade ankle-deep through Jew-ish ...ood and tears, but eventually they will pay for it, every drop, and the ...w will be present at the fun-eral ...t Hitlerism."

This was the sentiment expressed at the protest meeting in Massey Hall Sunday night at which the German dictator was referred to as "The Mad Paper Hanger of Potsdam" and "The Butcher of Berlin," and his followers were termed "Brown-Shirted Hooligans." The meeting, attended by citizens of all races and creeds, was called to protest against the alleged atrocities against the German Jewry at the hands of the German Nazis.

E. F. Singer, M.P.P., presented the following resolution, which was affirmed with prolonged cheers from the 3,500 who jammed the hall long before the meeting started:

"1. Whereas the Jews of Germany have been deprived of their political and civil equality with the suspension of the German constitution, and whereas the Hitlerites in power have taken advantage of the situation to initiate a vicious campaign of persecution and boycott against German Jewry.

"Be it resolved, that this assemblage register its protest against the inhuman treatment of the Jews in Germany and petition the German government to put a stop to all anti-Semitic activities, to abandon its plan for driving the Jews out of the country's professional and economic life, and to refrain from attempting to expel East-European Jewry from Germany, and to give them the rights which other non-nationals in Germany enjoy.

"Be it resolved, also, that if the German government does not change its policy toward its Jewish subjects, we shall proclaim a boycott and urge both Jews and non-Jews to co-operate in this boycott. We urge this measure not as an attack upon Germany or the German people. It is not against them, but against the destructive force of Hitlerism that this protest is directed.

"2. Whereas the Jews in Germany are now being subjected to a severe economic boycott that will bring suffering and starvation to thousands —

"Whereas the neighboring countries have not opened their doors to many of the German Jews fleeing from persecution and oppression —

"Whereas Palestine is now enjoying an economic prosperity that would enable it to absorb thousands of German Jews without injuring its economic equilibrium —

"Be it resolved, that this assemblage petition Great Britain to let down its immigration bars to Palestine for the refugees from Germany.

"3. Whereas the plight of our brethren in Germany grows increasingly alarming as the economic and professional boycott gains momentum, whereas such anti-Jewish activity threatens to reduce many Jews in Germany to a helpless state.

"Be it resolved, that this assemblage select a permanent committee to take whatever action it deems fit to organize financial and moral aid for German Jewry.

"Be it resolved, that copies of these resolutions adopted here be forwarded to the prime minister of Canada and to Germany's ambassador in the Dominion.

The speakers said they did not place much faith in Hitler's statement that the persecutions would cease when outside nations no longer attempted to interfere with the policy of Hitlerism. Boos and hisses came from every portion of the hall at the very mention of the name of Hitler. Emotion reached a high pitch when Cantor Wladowsky sobbed a memorial prayer.

Sam Factor, M.P.P., who returned from Ottawa to attend the meeting, pointed out that a trade agreement between Canada and Germany had expired last month and advised that the Dominion government refuse to renew the treaty until assurance has been given by Germany that the persecution shall cease forthwith.

"It is very tragic that in this age of enlightenment it becomes necessary for Jews to hold meetings to protest the treatment of their people in other lands," Mr. Factor stated.

To meet the atrocities of the moment, the Jews must revert to prayer in an attempt to rouse the outside world.

So greatly has Premier Bennett been moved by reports from Germany that he has instructed an official to get from Germany an authentic report of what is going on there, Mr. Factor added.

Archbishop Neil McNeil was given a tremendous ovation when he rose to speak.

"We are concerned with German citizens, people who have contributed largely to the welfare of that country," he said. "And yet to-day they are boycotted, not by the people as a whole, but by the Hitler party."

Loud cheers followed his statement that some two years ago the Catholic bishops in Germany and expressed disapproval of the Hitler policies.

"We are companions in this," the archbishop continued. "Often the speakers for the Hitler party have associated together the Jews and Rome. If this matter goes much farther we will all have to join together in a world campaign against these atrocities which, if allowed to continue, can have only one result — another world war."

"One would have thought that in these times of civilization such persecutions would have faded from the face of the earth," said Premier Henry. "Possibly as a citizen of the British Empire I expected too much. I thought people the world over had achieved the enlightenment of our empire. It is unbelievable to us that there should be persecution anywhere in the world. We have always stood for freedom of worship and of speech.

"The German and the British have sprung from the same stock and so I hope that within Germany itself there will arise a protest that will stifle this threatened violence.

"The Germans are a great people. Surely they, in this advanced state of civilization, will not permit any authority so to disgrace their country and their people."

"If the temper of this gathering is any indication, the world will not permit the Jew to suffer in silence," said Capt. Elmore Philpott. "The Jew of Germany may have to cry out with pain, but if so the people of the world should cry out 'for shame'."

"There is a law that is higher than laws of nations — the law of humanity," said Capt. Philpott. "After intimidating his own people, Hitler is trying to intimidate the whole world. This is no time for platitudes; we should see what we can do about it."

Much of the troubles, he said, is a direct result of the peace treaties and support should be given to a revision of the treaties in keeping with "justice and common sense."

The hall resounded with prolonged cheers when Capt. Philpott asked the meeting to urge upon all governments the immediate removal of all bans against Jewish immigration to Palestine.

"I can't imagine any red-blooded citizen not desiring to be present on such an occasion as this," said Rev. Canon Plumptre, representing Bishop Owen.

"When justice falls civilization crumbles to the ground," he warned his hearers. "A great injustice has been done, an injustice that touches the very heart of civilization.

"I am afraid that, politically, the treatment of Jews in Germany will be felt all over the world. It will disturb the fabric of world peace. The British people have been only too willing to forgive the German people for what is past and now this comes along to shake that fabric of faith."

Canon Plumptre urged his hearers not to be harsh in their judgment of the Germans.

"We are not all Christians, but we can at least all subscribe to the principles of His utterance, 'Father forgive them, for they know not what they do'," he declared.

"We are here?" said Rabbi Samuel Sachs, "because the pain is so deep we must cry out.

"Thousands of Jews in Germany have been thrown into jail without formality of trial, mutilated beyon recognition, insulted in the grossest manner and at the same time forced to tell the world that all is well. Many of them have even given up their religion. What more can they do? And yet they are treated alike.

"Our Jewish brothers in Germany are now being paid with evil and brutality for all their service to the Fatherland, asserted Rabbi Sachs. "Many people in the past have attempted to exterminate the Jew and what has happened? The Jew has lived to be present at their funerals, to see them buried never to rise again.

Rabbi Sachs discounted rumors that Jews in Toronto had dismissed their German employees. "We are not fighting Germans in Germany and we are not fighting Germans in Toronto," he said.

Representing labor, Controller James Simpson spoke briefly.

"Our presence here is a protest against this thing that threatens every right of democratic government," he said. "Hitlerism oppresses its citizens and throws democracy into doubt. If it spreads at all it strikes a blow at everything we have fought for for centuries.

"We all believed that after the world war, a code would be evolved that would let us all live together as brothers. Now we see violence again coming forward to destroy all that.

"It is up to Germany to stop its censorship, and let its newspapers send out to the world the truth of what is going on within the country. I cannot realize how any nation that has boasted of its culture, can allow such things to go on within its borders."

"There hasn't been a generation of the world when some group or groups of persons have not been victims of persecution; but the Jews have been the object of the most vicious pogroms," E. F. Singer, M.P.P., said.

The resolution, introduced by Mr. Singer, was seconded by Alderman Joel Glass. M. Shapiro spoke to the gathering in Yiddish.

In suspense which revealed pent-up emotions Jews and Gentiles met in common, and emphatic, protest of reported atrocities by Hitlerites against Jews and other citizens and residents of Germany at a mass meeting at the Grand Opera House, Hamilton, Ont., Sunday afternoon.

Creeds, nationalities and political beliefs were immersed in one cauldron to brew a resolution unanimously adopted calling on the British Government and the nations of the world to take steps to peaceably prevail on the Government of Germany, to see that such atrocities are immediately stopped.

The resolution was as follows: "Whereas reports were being received of unwarranted persecution of Jews by Nazi adherents in Germany; whereas such actions, if true, should be the subject of severest censure and protest; be it resolved that the citizens of Hamilton express their protest, censure and horror at the anti-Jewish action in Germany which is denying Jews the fundamental rights of every human being in a spirit contrary to traditions of British freedom, of religion and of liberty.

"Be it resolved that the Government of Britain and Canada be petitioned to use whatever humane methods are within their power to prevent continuance and recurrence of such abhorrent tactics and to alleviate the distress necessarily following it and that there be offered a place of refuge within the British Empire to those unfortunate and helpless, persecuted human beings."

Rabbi S. Levine, opened the meeting with a prayer. Speakers were J. A. Sweet, chairman; C. W. Bell, K.C., M.P.; Mayor Peebles; Rabbi Fink, of Buffalo; Humphrey Mitchell, M.L.A.; Rabbi Feldman, W. H. Lovering, D. A. Robinson, Rev. William Barclay and Bishop Broughall. About 2,000 attended.

1,200 people, at London, Ont., representative of all walks of life and various religious denominations protested against the alleged persecution of Jewry in Germany by Chancellor Hitler and his Nazi followers at a mass meeting held in the Patricia Theatre.

At Windsor the meeting passed a resolution petitioning the German government to stop anti-semitic activity and to give Jewry the rights other nationals enjoy.

Palestine Labor Official Says Men Needed for Industry and Land

Economic progress in Palestine is dependent upon a broader scale of labor immigration and a continued influx of Jewish national funds, I. Mereminsky, secretary of the Palestine Federation of Labor, stated Sunday night, April 2 at the opening banquet of the ninth annual appeal for Jewish labor at the Hebrew Educational Institute, St. Joseph boulevard west.

There is room at the present time for at least 13,600 new workers, Mr. Mereminsky asserted, stating that 5,000 were needed in the various industries, 5,600 on the citrus plantations and 3,000 for public works and general construction. He felt that there should be no government restrictions to bar the free passage of immigrants, particularly as workers were needed.

Palestine is lacking in adequate population to forge ahead as it should, in the opinion of Mr. Mereminsky, who pointed out that there is plenty of vacant land waiting for colonizers. There are only 205,000 Jews resident in the country now, but new colonies and new undertakings could make decided progress if given the necessary populace. Private initiative would make great headway, he believed, if more Jewish national funds were forthcoming, and there remained the danger that this source of revenue, if stopped, would have an adverse effect on the prosperity now being enjoyed by Palestinians.

The advent of Jewish colonization in Palestine has been a decided boon to Jews and Arabs alike, Mr. Mereminsky said. Where Arabs in Trans-Jordania only get eight cents per day, those in Syria get 16 cents daily, but Arabs in Palestine receive a minimum of 40 cents daily from Arab employers and from 48 to 52 cents a day from Jewish employers. Jewish economic life in Palestine is thriving because of the interest taken by Jews outside of the country who are kind enough to subscribe to its further upbuilding. All money is invested in cooperation with Jewish labor, making possible the furthering of private initiative. Mr. Mereminsky concluded, urging support of the present campaign for $3,000 to help pioneers to settle on the land.

P. Cruso, of New York City, spoke briefly. L. Zucker was in the chair. M. Dickstein, L. Cheifetz and S. Chait are on the executive.

Rev. I. De La Penha Signally Honored

Honor was paid to Rev. I. De La Penha, of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, Sunday night, March 27 when his 25th anniversary in the ministry was celebrated by a large attendance of friends who felicitated him on his successful career with the oldest synagogue on the British North American continent.

Rev. I. De La Penha

Rev. Mr. De La Penha, who was born in Amsterdam, of an old Spanish family lost his parents at a very early age and was educated at the Abe Jetomim in Amsterdam.

He is a direct descendant of Daniel De La Penha, recipient of the famous Labrador grant from William of Orange. He came to Montreal in 1908 and became a collaborator of the late Rabbi Mendola de Sola in the Spanish and Portuguese Congregation. He had already been associated for five years with the Spanish and Portuguese congregation in New York City.

In dwelling upon the unswerving loyalty of Rev. I. De La Penha, Charles I. Bender, rabbi of the synagogue, stated that the honored guest had found the true secret of being both a good man as well as a religious man. At all times, he was known as vitally interested in all matters of Jewish life. Rev. Dr. H. Abramowitz, also spoke.

Capt. W. Sebag Montefiore, president, referred to the historic significance of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue the first of the Spanish-Portuguese branch of Judaism to be founded on the American continent and dates back to 1768.

A purse of money was tendered to the guest of honor and a special gift was given to his wife.

Flexner Urges School for Gifted Pupils

The setting aside of a city high school for New York's specially gifted children, so that they may receive particular attention and training in accordance with their ability without being held back by the children of average intelligence, was advocated by Dr. Abraham Flexner, director of the Institute of Advanced Study and noted educator. He addressed the ninth annual meeting and luncheon of science teachers of New York at the Biltmore, attended by more than 650 teachers in the various sciences in the city's public and high schools.

"There is much talk nowadays about economic waste," said Dr. Flexner, "but no one says a word about the tremendous intellectual waste that goes down into the gutter in the city of New York. Some years ago, when I was a member of the Board of Education in Mayor Mitchel's administration, I proposed setting aside one of the city's high schools for the city's gifted children, irrespective of race, creed, color, social position or wealth. My proposition was defeated by a vote of something like 30 to 2.

"I want once more to urge you to do your utmost to bring this thing about. While we must do all we can for the average child and the subnormal child, we must not do it at the expense of the gifted child, who is now being held back by the children of average mentality.

"A democracy like ours must have leadership of brains if we do not want such calamities as took place last week to be repeated, possibly on even a larger scale. Such intelligent leadership for the future will be vastly helped by the bringing together in one school of all the brilliant children of the city.

RELIEF

By Ernest Edelstein of Ottawa

Fifty thousand dollars! Yes, fifty thousand dollars. Quite a sum of money. Dollars. Little green bills that meant life, food, clothing, warmth and happiness to many unfortunate people. Poor people. Unemployed people. Men, women, whose faces show deep lines . . . and whose eyes were sad and their voices spiritless. Days, months of idleness, Always looking for the sunshine and finding only clouds . . . casting their destinies into the uncertain future, leaving their fate in fortune's hands.

That was the picture, the true picture of actuality that presented itself to Bert Harris as he stood on the familiar corner reading the newspaper announcement of the relief campaign for fifty thousand dollars. And on this corner, against the cold grey stone wall of the huge building, a pathetic-looking old man sat on a little soap box pitifully scratching out feeble and old fashioned tunes on a violin, and what a violin! Snow was falling upon it, covering the strings and making it more difficult for its owner to command the attention of passers-by. The snow flakes were filling his tin cup that waited for coins. But Bert never passed this old man without leaving his small and sincere contribution. No, he would not feel right had he neglected this little duty.

Bert Harris was not wealthy. Just a single, working fellow looking after a home. Plenty of responsibility always and like many others lately his salary had been greatly reduced. But he was satisfied. It would be only for a little while. One had to take the bad with the good. After all, that was life.

Next day at the store, workers of the civic relief campaign committee made their usual plea for a generous donation to such a worthy cause. Of course Bert was ready to give his share but when they approached him he felt ashamed and disappointed that circumstances forced him to make a small contribution. Naturally he was assured that anything would be welcome but he could not help feeling that more was expected of him.

Closing time. Another day over and again we see him standing on the corner this evening. We see also the little old fiddler still playing on his dilapidated instrument with the little tin cup hanging from his violin handle and swinging from side to side with each gust of the cold winter wind: and once more we see Bert placing his coin in the little tin cup in order that hunger might not be too harsh with this unfortunate fellow.

Strange old fellow, thought Bert. He had been on this corner ever since he could remember; a couple of years anyway, and he always wore the same old cap and ragged overcoat. His shoes too were in sad condition. But the old fiddler never seemed to change. His eyes always looked straight ahead and to Bert Harris it seemed that he had seen better days. As he watched the little fiddler he thought he noticed a faint smile, a smile that possibly came to him as he recalled better days . . . beside a warm fireplace and a bed in which to sleep; and with the exception of a weak muttering which Bert thought was the man's way of saying thanks, he had never spoken to the daily contributor to his little tin cup. Bert also wondered if the old fiddler would be looked after properly when the relief fund had been well-subscribed to. Of course he would. They would see that no one suffered. At this point in his wonderings, he was interrupted by a small weak voice that said "excuse me, Mister." To his surprise, it was the old fiddler speaking. He continued slowly ". . . could you please tell me where the nearest relief office is located?" Bert hesitated before answering this question. Had the poor fellow reached the end of his rope? Had he decided to leave this cold, windy corner and apply for relief?

"Yes, I can direct you there. Just a block up and turn to your left. You'll see it before you reach Main Street." Then Bert could no longer withhold his curiosity and he said "Are you going to leave this corner and get your relief?"

The little fiddler did not answer immediately but proceeded to pack up his battered fiddle and place it carefully into its worn case. Then he emptied the little tin cup into his glove and slowly counted it out until he calculated his takings for the day at the sum of one dollar, in pennies and nickels. Then he placed the money in his overcoat pocket and with that faint smile of his

he said "Relief? Leave this corner? No! No! my friend. I am going to give them this dollar as my contribution. It's the best I can do but I know it will help to keep some poor soul from going hungry."

When Bert Harris read the paper on Saturday night which was the time limit for the campaign, he was happy to see that the objective had been reached. Fifty thousand dollars.

And, in that fifty thousand dollars, he knew two of them . . . and knew them well. Because one was his dollar — and the other was the dollar that came from the little tin cup of the poor old fiddler on the corner.

TRY A BIT OF GAY EMBROIDERY

There must be lots of corners in lots of homes which would be considerably brighter and gayer if this proud cock in all his cheerfully colored plumage were perched upon some cushion there. He's equally as attractive on runners or chairbacks or shopping bags, too. And what a delightful nursery motif he makes, standing there on the drapes, the bedspread and the cushions with his bright yellow beak stuck up in the air — just exactly the sort of thing all children love. In short, you'll find him a valuable asset in any part of the house where a touch of bright color may be used to advantage.

"Le Coq," as you know, is the emblem of the French Nation. This little fellow must have come straight from Paris, for where else could he have attained just that air of sophisticated smartness? Perhaps that explains, too, why he always looks quite assured and at home in whatever surroundings you place him. But don't let the atmosphere of sophistication fool you — he really is very simple indeed under it all. As a matter of fact, you only need to know two embroidery stitches, and very simple ones at that, to be able to put him on anything you like. What are they? The ordinary long and short stitch and the satin stitch, which are really two versions of the same stitch used in slightly different ways. The color chart which appears below will show you just how to place the colors and the close-up of the completed design will give you a pretty clear idea of how the stitches are arranged.

The following are the shades in Clark's "Anchor" Stranded Cotton which you will require to embroider "Le Coq":—

Windsor Salt for Passover

During Passover Jewish people are particularly careful to avoid any contact of chometz with meat and salt. This is made easy by being careful when buying salt for koshering meats. We know that pure salt is Kosher as it is a mineral essential to health and comes from deposits lying many hundreds of feet below the surface. But salt is like other Kosher substances that may or may not become contaminated by contact with things that are prohibited. That is why Jewish people prefer to buy salt in a package and also why everyone is now asking the grocer for Windsor Salt in its wonderful new Special Jewish Kosher package. This has just been introduced to the public. It contains about three pounds of Windsor Salt of the grade you may be familiar with in the special Jewish bag of Windsor Salt. Windsor Salt is ideal for Passover. During all processes of manufacture it never comes in contact with human hands and is protected from the moment it is put in the package until you apply it to your meats. The new package keeps the salt dry and clean and is very much handier in use than salt in any other kind of container.

The high purity of Windsor Salt is extremely important. Highly pure salt stimulates the natural flavors in your meats and makes them much more enjoyable. This is not so with ordinary salt, which may contain bitter impurities that hide the flavors. The purity of Windsor Salt is maintained through daily supervision by chemists.

Windsor Salt distributes evenly. Jewish people also like to remember that Windsor Salt is made in Canada by Canadians and the new package bears the Rabbi's seal, indicating that it is Kosher and entirely conforms with Jewish dietary laws in every particular. Windsor brands of Salt for other uses during the year are also equally Kosher and are sold in protecting packages. These include Windsor Iodized Salt for table cooking and goitre prevention, and Regal Table Salt, dainty fine grain salt, which is free running in all weathers.

the sympathies of our fellow men. Yes, and we must, in the name of God, demand that they do more than join in vocal protest. We must ask of them, in the spirit of true brotherhood, to bid welcome to the Jew even to their own borders. What incongruity there is in the presence of ringing words of protest against Hitler's hatred of the Jew and our own refusal to permit a few more of those same Jews to enter our midst! It is not enough that we ask for more certificates of entry to Palestine. These should be sought; these should be forthcoming if Britain means what she said in the Balfour Declarations. There never was a more propitious time to prove the sincerity of that decree. But in addition to this, even more is needed. Here is a broad, sparsely-populated Dominion. What "wide, open spaces" we really have strikes vividly home no matter where one travels across this far-stretching land. Depression or no depression, it is the height of selfishness to keep down the gates to this fair country which God gave not unto us alone, but unto all the children of men. A new Exodus is the most urgent need of the hour. The seas will not magically open for the Jews of Germany. But through our consecrated efforts the gates of many nations might be flung wide, and thus would God once more, with "an outstretched arm" of brotherly welcome and true hospitality, redeem His people, Israel.

Over 10,000 Montrealers Gather in Protest Against Hitlerism

Mayor Fernand Rinfret, Hon. Honoré Mercier, Senator Raoul Dandurand and Bishop Farthing Are Among Speakers

Into the Mount Royal Arena crowded thousands of Montreal Jews Thursday night, made solemn by events in Germany during the past few weeks; there they were joined in their protest by men of other faiths and races who condemned Hitler and those who support him, while at the same time they sought assurance and hope for the future in the belief that the Nazi programme and actions do not represent the spirit of free Germany.

A former president of the Assembly of the League of Nations symbolized in his person the new freedom for minorities born of the Treaty of Versailles; a bishop of the Church of England brought to the meeting the protest of organized Christianity at outrages committed in a supposedly Christian country; a provincial cabinet minister brought the official protest of the civil power, while members of the Federal House voiced the indignation and sorrow of the whole people.

Senator Raoul Dandurand, former president of the Assembly of the League of Nations, struck the keynote when he recalled Germany's former adherence to the League's principle that the rights of minorities should be protected. He lifted the meeting out of the atmosphere of strictly Jewish protest to a higher plane of moral and political principle, and merely by quoting a few phrases from his own addresses at Geneva in 1927 condemned present-day German action by that country's very adherence to the principle enunciated.

"The first duty of every government," he said then and repeated again, "is to promote the well-being of its people, not only of the majority of the people but of the whole nation. . . . Minorities should be treated not only justly, but even generously, so that they may forget that they are minorities. This, in my view, is the highest manifestation of civilization."

"No group at Geneva then," he added, "applauded more diligently than the German delegation headed by Dr. Streseman. Is it possible that it is the same German nation which a few days ago participated in the boycott of the Jews, a German minority of 700,000 people standing high in the community?"

The huge gathering had paid marked tribute to each of the distinguished speakers as they approached the platform, but when Senator Dandurand entered the hall escorted by two members of the organizing committee, the entire audience rose to its feet and applauded the thing he symbolized. The League of Nations and all it stood for had joined in this protest.

Mayor Fernand Rinfret presided over the gathering and he did so in the triple capacity of Mayor of Montreal, a member of the federal Parliament and an individual. He was joined in his protest by Bishop Farthing, the Rev. Leslie Pidgeon, the Hon. Honore Mercier, Quebec Minister, S. W. Jacobs, M.P., A. A. Heaps, M.P., Samuel Factor, M.P., Joseph Mercier, M.P., Joseph Cohen, M.L.A., Peter Bercovitch, M.L.A., Anatole Plante, M.L.A., Aldermen Schubert, Siegler and Schwartz; the Hon. Gordon W. Scott, M.L.C., the Hon. Walter Mitchell, Lyon Cohen, Rabbi H. Abramowitz, Rabbi Julius Berger, Rabbi Harry Stern, Rabbi I. Rosenberg and a host of others, clergymen and laymen.

"We stand here tonight," Mayor Rinfret said, "for a dual principle, which must be upheld and defended everywhere and with all the might in our possession: the cause of liberty, the respect of the rights of minorities. . . . . By acting in such a way, not only has the Nazi government and its blinded partisans disregarded the essential ethics of humanity and justice, but they have also, in our opinion, worked against the best interests of their own country and soiled the German flag with a blur that will not be deleted for many years to come, unless a sudden repentance and change of heart and change of policy intervene at the nearest instance."

Sir Robert Borden, Canada's principal representative at the Paris Peace Conference, while he was not present at the meeting, sent a stirring message which was vigorously applauded. "In science," he wrote, "in all the arts, in literature and indeed in every high endeavor, German citizens of the Jewish faith have given to that country and the world an imperishable service. Recent reports from Germany have stirred the people of all civilized countries with deep emotion. But the events that have been recorded cannot be recorded as the expression of the normal sentiment of the real nature of the great German nation, but rather the temporary effervescence of unfortunate passion that will soon pass away. Let your people be of good cheer, remembering the words of the psalmist: 'Sorrow may endure for a night, but joy comes in the morning.'

The Hon. Honore Mercier, Minister of Lands and Forests in the Quebec Government, spoke in the name of the Prime Minister of Quebec and at his personal request. "I have come here," he said, "to join this meeting in protest against the reactionary misdoings perpetrated in one of the oldest civilized countries in Europe. It is an historical fact that intolerance has never wrought anything but disorder, mischief passion and national prejudice. The systematic discrimination practised by German political parties against Jews is most regrettable and cannot prepare peace nor prosperity. One cannot build or rebuild a country with wrath or racial preferment."

After paying a tribute to the part Jews have played in modern civilization, Mr. Mercier referred to the tolerance, with which all minorities have always been treated in Canada. "Our country," he said, "has been built on tolerance and the protection of minorities. Our message to the Jewish community of the province is one of faith, courage and confidence. That they should bear this burden with fortitude, patience, calmness is the opinion of the well-thinking people. The true evil will in due time reveal where it is really lying. While some nations are indulging in extreme reactions, let not the Jewish people forget their spirit of solidarity to which they owe their contribution to the economic life of other nationalities."

Referring to the fact that of out of 13 Nobel prize winners in Germany, seven were Jews, Rabbi Herman Abramowitz said: "It is this type that Hitler would reduce to the status of economic helots and social untouchables." And, in another place: "The Jews have been in Germany a thousand years; Hitler has been a German but one."

S. W. Jacobs, M.P.: "Although Hitler may be half-madman, half-zealot, he is not mad enough to stir up the whole world against Germany. The whole world is behind the Jewish people and, if that should fail, 'He who watches over Israel slumbers not nor sleeps.' We have conquered other difficulties in our day; we will conquer this one in due time."

Joseph Mercier, M.P.; "Gladstone aroused the people of the world over Turkish atrocities in Armenia, but no one thought the world would have to get together to protest against the treatment accorded a peaceful minority in Germany."

A. A. Heaps, M.P.: "This is not the regeneration of Germany, but its degeneration."

Bishop Farthing: "Had democracy been true to its task Hitler would never have obtained power. Let us see to it that our democracy is kept clean and pure and free from all kinds of corruption."

Rev. Dr. Pidgeon: "Other Christians can only clear themselves of complicity when they protest as they are protesting tonight."

Rabbi Stern: "Our protest tonight is an appeal to the higher spirit in the German people, not a protest of hatred. It is an appeal to the German people of Lessing, Shliermacher, of Kant, Goethe, Schiller and Einstein."

A committee consisting of Rabbi Harry J. Stern, Rabbi H. Abramowitz, Simon Belkin, H. M. Ripstein, I. Bruck, L. Zucker and Dr. Norman Viner arranged the meeting.

A NOVEL INDUSTRY

One of the most novel and interesting articles recently placed on the market is a new form of bandage called PLASTOBIND which is being manufactured by the First Aid Bandage Company of Montreal.

This bandage consists of a strip of porous rubber which has been so treated that it is cohesive but not adhesive, that is it will stick to itself but not to the skin or hair. This characteristic prevents the painful removal and the reopening of the wound that almost always occurs with the use of Adhesive tapes and the fact that it is porous prevents maceration of the skin.

PLASTOBIND is particularly well adapted to the use of unskilled people for it molds itself to the contours of the body and it will not slip or come off after it has been applied nor is it affected by water or soap. Its appearance is one of extreme neatness and since it is flesh colored it is practically invisible.

PLASTOBIND is the original flesh colored and medicated rubber bandage. Ask for it at your drug store and keep a roll handy for minor accidents.

Montreal Talmud Torah Campaign April 23

Barney Aaron, Chairman of the 1932 Campaign of Talmud Torah, will act as Chairman of the Campaign this year. The position of the Vaad Hair has been clarified in the course of the last few months. A subsidy to Talmud Torah of about $1000 a month during the first year is assured.

The Campaign will appeal to the Jewish Public for renewal of last year's contributions as well as for new subscriptions. These offerings of individual donors and subscribers to Talmud Torah still continue to be the backbone of Talmud Torah support. The impoverishment of certain sections has brought the number of free pupils in Talmud Torah to more than fifty percent of the total enrollment and has reduced the income of paying pupils.

Tuesday, April 18, the last day of Passover, Talmud Torah will be discussed from every pulpit.

C. B. Falner, is chairman of the Executive Committee consisting of Barney Aaron, J. Albert, Lyon Cohen, C. B. Falner, L. Glazer, Samuel Hart, A. Raginsky Sr., H. Sessenwein, B. Levitt, Alderman Max Seigler, B. M. Weiner, M. Schneiderman.

Council Camp Campaign For $5,000

The continued support of the general public to enable the Council of Jewish Women of Montreal to maintain their summer camp for children, was asked for by Mrs. Jack Victor, chairman of Council Camp Committee, at a meeting held to discuss plans for the forthcoming camp campaign for $5,000. The campaign will be inaugurated at an open meeting of Council, at the Mount Royal Hotel, April 19.

Pleading that Council Camp this year was "neither a luxury nor a non-essential of welfare work but to give some 150 girls an opportunity to regain their health and mental grasp of life by two weeks of sunshine, fresh air, nourishing food and sunshine," Mrs. Victor pointed out that an increasing number of cases under the supervision and observation of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies made it imperative that Council Camp try to accommodate a larger number of girls than last year. Camp committee: Mrs. J. Kruger, president of the Council, Mrs. Louis J. Notkin, publicity and Mesdames Sol Vineberg, M. Greenblatt, H. Hart, J. Freidman, M. Bernfeld, H. Grover, J. C. Zacks, C. ## Aleksandre Bercovitch Acclaimed by Art Lovers

During the month of April it will be the privilege of art lovers in Montreal to see the work of Aleksandre Bercovitch at the Sidney Carter Art Gallery, 1468 Drummond St. Although Bercovitch has lived in Montreal for several years, his work is comparatively new to the public here.

He was born in Cherson, a town in southern Russia famous as a centre of artistic growth. During the first decade of this century, when futurism was introduced into Russia, Bercovitch was influenced by it from the outset. Although very young at the time, he was at once drawn into a group that began to expound the new theories of art. In 1911 he went to Palestine where he attended the "Bezalael School," conducted by Professor Schatz whose aim it was to found a school of Jewish art based on Oriental culture. The outbreak of the World War found Bercovitch in Munich, studying at the Academy. In 1916, however, he was forced to return to Russia. After the Revolution he became interested in stage production and designed sets at the National Theatres for the operas of Glinka, Moussorgsky and Tchaikowsky. In 1922 he went to Leningrad where he continued to paint at the National Academy for the next two years.

The Industrial Exhibition of the U.S.S.R. held in Moscow in 1924, gave him an excellent opportunity to unfold his talent. He helped to design the Turkestan Pavilion, contributing a number of murals. The studies entailed by this work aroused his interest in Turkestan to such an extent that he decided to visit the province. For the next three years he lived there, making a thorough analysis of Russian Oriental art as revealed by numerous archeological discoveries of buried Asiatic cities.

Aleksandre Bercovitch has painted the natives of Turkestan with amazing boldness and originality. His conception of form is based on Oriental rather than European standards. He has rendered the mountain scenes of Aschabad and the surrounding country with a red hue that is startling in its virility, simplicity and directness. He is obviously an artist whom one must take seriously.

Having started with Purim week and continuing during the four weeks until Passover, the "Ylympics", a series of ten standard physical ability and athletic tests similar to the Olympic events, will be conducted again in YMHAs, YWHAs, and Jewish Community Centers throughout the United States and Canada. These events have been organized and supervised by the National Jewish Welfare Board, which tabulates the result of this nation-wide competition and awards a championship trophy to the winning organization, and certificates to each individual making the best record in each of the ten events. In 1932, the Jewish People's Institute of Chicago won the Ylympic Championship. The Scranton YMHA was second and the Montreal YMHA was third.

The object of the Ylympics is to afford additional wholesome and healthy activity for the leisure time of unemployed and other members of YMHAs and Jewish Centers. The Ylympics furthermore are not planned as competitions, but as a means of self-improvement in the physical condition of participants. They require a minimum of apparatus and expense and can be undertaken by small as well as large Centers and by girls and woman as well as men and boys. Fifteen organizations participated in the initial Ylympics of 1932 and entered several hundred of their members. A larger number of YMHA and Jewish Centers will participate in 1933. The YMHA Point Winners in the Ylympics of 1932 were: Senior Men: J. Caplan, M. Gould, A. Kushner, M. Abramovitch; Intermediates: Max Bercovitch, L. Slabotsky, Lionel Caplan, Abe Goldberg, Harry Rabinovitch; Juniors, Syd. Tafler, L. Leiffer.

The Annual Passover Dance will be conducted on Sunday, April 9, under the auspices of the Senior Club Council, directed by A. Feiner; Armand Meerte and his orchestra will supply the music. Committee in charge, Lou Horowitz, D. Goodman, B. Ikeman, H. Kositsky, S. Potash, B. Dreben, S. Backler, A. Kushner, O. Goldstein, H. Suffrin, J. Kaylor, H. Lehrer, L. Phillips, L. I. Pinder, S. Stein, H. Rodier, J. Margolius, J. L. Yates.

Junior Clubs will have special Passover programs at their meetings Sunday, April 9. At these meetings, special honours will be given those who have been chosen at the closing Havdallah gathering as the best representative of their clubs. RECITAL APRIL 19

Miss Clarice Lewis will present her pupils in a recital of recitations, monologues and sketches at the Windsor Hotel, April 19, at 2.30 p.m. Among those taking part are Lois Kutzman, Florence Allman, Shirley Levitt, Bernie Leffell, Baela Fainer, Beatrice Sandys, Phyllis Carr, Ann Abrams, Goldie Fainer, Betty Rigler, Phyllis Sabbath, Dorothy Zinman.

RENE DU MOULIN,

Manager of Du Moulin Automobile Enrg. has had 15 years experience in the automobile business. For the past 14 years he has been with the Legare Auto Co., and, before that he was manager for Eastern Canada, for the Tiger Rubber Co. Ltd. Situated in beautiful showrooms at 1227 Lafontaine Park, he is now in business for himself, selling the famous Buick and Pontiac and also a selected line of used cars. Du Moulin Automobile Enrg., has a storage capacity for 55 cars with day and night service. Cars are delivered to your door in the morning and you are driven home from the garage at night for a very moderate sum. General repairs on all makes of cars, and body work and paint jobs are other branches of work that Du Moulin Automobile Enrg. is featuring.

Pontiac's 1933 Straight Eight is the expression of General Motors' determination to place large, fine car onwership within the reach of every purse, however modest; to offer, at low prices, the features and building standards of large, quality automobiles.

As a prime example, consider the motor. Its full-pressure lubrication —its thorough cooling system—its high compression — its careful matching of parts—these are instances of design as excellent as any car can have, no matter what its price.

Possibly most important of all, the public knows that a General Motors car must be right all the way through. It is built right, then sold by reputable dealers. Fair and liberal terms are available through G.M.A.C. This year, too Pontiac offers a Dominion-wide Lubrication Plan in addition to its broad and generous Owner Service Policy. This new plan entitles the purchaser of any Pontiac car to ten free lubrications—which may be obtained from any authorized Pontiac dealer in Canada. It is designed to protect your investment and assure you of More and Better Miles from your Pontiac Straight Eight.
